

EXPLAINING THAT 30 CENTS

Champ Clark Wanted to Know About It, and the Clerk Gave Him the Information.

Champ Clark likes shirts that have a small red stripe. Not long ago he went into the shop of a Washington haberdasher to buy a dress shirt.

"I found a fine shirt with small red stripes and I like to wear that kind. During the war you could not get a shirt with red stripes which would not fade. I said to the clerk: 'What is the price of that shirt?'"

SCORE ONE FOR MRS. JONES

Neat Retort That Certainly Should Have Made Her Better Half Do Some Thinking.

How he ever happened to do it, heaven only knows, but Jones really brought home a small box of candy and gave it to his wife with a lordly and gracious air.

"I happened to be with Smith when he gave his wife a present yesterday. Now, there's a woman who can really show a man that she appreciates a thing! Her expressions of thanks were really charming."

"Doubtless, but consider how much practice she has," Mrs. Jones responded sweetly.

BROUGHT HIM TO THE POINT

Maidens Confession Was Something Most Dilatory Lover Could Hardly Affect to Ignore.

For many months he had been eating free suppers at her father's expense and the fair Mabel thought it time he got a move on.

"Oh, how funny," she cried suddenly, as she turned over the pages of the evening paper.

"What is it?" he asked. "Why, here's an advertisement in which it says, 'No reasonable offer refused.'"

"What's odd about that?" asked the young man in surprise. "Oh, nothing," she replied coolly, trying to raise a blush.

"Three weeks later the invitations—Burglary is Not Profitable. When one reads in the paper an account of a burglary where the thief succeeded in securing $5,000 to $10,000 worth of jewelry, one is apt to think that the spoils were probably worth the risk."

"The Ethel Query. Two fellow members of a club were having an indignation meeting and were comparing notes.

"Both had domestic strife. 'Aren't women the limit?' growled the first. 'We husbands don't know anything at all, and our wives know everything!'"

"Open Seams. 'Did you have any trouble in seeing that captain of industry whose time is reputed to be worth almost a million a minute?'"

"A Calculating Nature. 'Why did you refuse to take summer boarders this year?' 'I've been to town quite several times,' answered Farmer Cornsloss.

"Just a Row. 'Did you ever try working the ouija board?' 'Yes.' 'Ever get anything out of it?' 'Once. Got a family row. Ma accused me of molesting it and I swore she was making the thing move.'"

PLAIN AND PLAID

Interesting Wrap Is Developed in Wool Serge.

Cape Cut in One Piece With Front—Embellished With Lining of Green and Blue.

A wrap developed in plain and plaid wool serge is shown. Blue serge is the material used. A straight-hanging cape back has a lining of green and blue plaid and the plaid is repeated in the collar.

Other plaid wraps, writes a Paris fashion authority, are on the order of the traveling coats beloved by Englishwomen. An interesting one of plaid velours—navy blue, tan and green—is in regulation coat style drawn in slightly at the waistline with a black patent leather belt.

Coat of Blue Serge.

coat itself by means of buttons and buttonholes. This model, recently imported, is a favorite with Frenchwomen, who consider it very smart to carry the little cape on the arm. The lining is of brilliant green silk.

A navy blue duster motor wrap has, as its most unusual feature, a collar of blue and white-checked angora that continues down the entire length of the front at either side.

"The raffia buckles on hats. Many Possibilities in Store for the Discarded Panama or Deserted Fabric Headgear.

Are you wondering what to do with that little odd sport hat which gave you such good service last season? Perhaps it is a Panama or fabric and still has many possibilities!

The most effective buckles are made of two color raffia. The forms are round and round with raffia and then the edges are finished with a simple bit of stitching.

To do this bit of stitching, hold one strand of raffia in place along the outline of the buckle and with another strand in your needle catch the outlining strand in as many places as you choose.

Green outlined in brown, natural colored raffia outlined in dark brown, or orange, and tan outlined in rose, all make very effective color schemes for the buckles.

Cotton Blouses Good. It is several years since so many cotton blouses have been offered. Sheer cotton dresses are very much in the limelight, and that blouses and separate skirts should follow suit.

Sardonyx the Latest. The newest color for undergarments is sardonyx, which is a little deeper than ashes of roses, and a little lighter than the rust shades.

IN LIGHTER VEIN

Poetry and Prose. "Of in my silent vigils, I hear the voices of the night."

Ma Was a Widow. "Would your mother get mad if I stole a kiss?" "From her or from me?" asked the girl.

Comparative Taste. "Give me a bit of that stuff to try." "I warn you if you take a bit you will find it bitter."

About All We Can Do. "Saying up for your vacation?" "Not a bit of it. Saving up to pay my taxes."

The Vote. "What were the chief features of the meeting?" "I imagine they were the eyes and nose."

Of Doubtful Origin. "How did you like that Spanish cigar I gave you, old man?" "Did you say 'Spanish' or 'splinch-achy?'"

Wouldn't Do It. Dugan—Su ye called me a prevaricator? Cassidy—Ye're a liar! O! did not.

Its Merit. "The wild goose is neither graceful nor beautiful." "No, but when you come to the point, it is game."

No Objection to That. "Jims was held up the other night—" "By a bandit?" "No; as a shining example."

Not His Class. "That old miser is sul generis." "Nothing of the sort. There is nothing generous about him."

Oh, Fudge. "Got anything in the shape of a house?" "Got a full line of tents. Exact shape of a house."

Most He Could Say. "Your daughter is learning to play the piano, isn't she?" "Er—well—she's practicing."

Liked the Sample. Mrs. Louett—Do you like my new dinner gown, dear? Husband—The part you have on.

Cause of the Ride. Sheridan spurred on Winchester. "Twenty miles is too far away for a dark horse," he explained.

Painful. "His notes come from his chest." "I'm glad he got that one off his chest."

Point of Origin. Jerry was engaged in his nightly shelling of Varennes. A negro pioneer from the corps ammunition dump, seeking an abri, clambered down into an artillery P. C. and lay down beside the captain, who was catching a few moments' sleep.

Promoting Unrest. "I am very much afraid the Germans intend to be as troublesome as possible in the future," remarked the man with a suspicious nature.

Judging by Appearances. "I beg your pardon," said the dyspeptic man who had been caught gazing intently at a stranger. "You remind me of somebody I know."

Missed the Switch. I thought I had all my belongings when I left my berth for the dressing room. When I was ready to do my hair I missed my switch of artificial curls.

He Did. "My wife had invited some people for Sunday dinner, but I forgot and went fishing." "Catch anything?" "I sure did!" "Where?" "At home."

Committed. "What's the fuss in the yard?" "Our dog has just bitten a candidate."

Too Expensive. "Throw any old shoes at the bride?" "Not much. If I had any old shoes to throw away I'd get 'em fixed up and wear 'em."

Her Wish. "Is your husband fond of golf?" "I'll say so. I wish he paid as much attention to me as he does to that old game."

THE LITTLE GIRL

By CARLA F. ROSENTHAL.

Cast of characters: Little Girl, Little Girl's Mother, Little Girl's Mother's Friend, Clerk.

Scene: Millinery store. Little Girl trying on a hat. Little Girl's Mother—Now, Dorothy, you must select it yourself. I won't say a word. (To Clerk)—It's her birthday today and I told her that as a birthday present she might select her own hat.

Little Girl (looks critically at both)—The blue one is pretty, mamma. Little Girl's Mother—Uh, hm. (To Friend)—Don't you think that the pink one is sweeter? Aren't those streamers lovely?

Little Girl's Mother's Friend—Beautiful! Little Girl (doubtfully)—I don't believe I care very much for streamers. Little Girl's Mother (to Friend)—And don't you think the shape is pretty? Doesn't that curve look well on Dorothy?

Little Girl's Mother's Friend (enthusiastically)—It's just as becoming, as it can be! Clerk—It is pretty, and it looks well on her, too. The color is so becoming to her.

L. G. M.—Yes, it looks nice on her, but—I don't know. I'm afraid it won't go well with some of her dresses. It's a trying color, you see, and besides, I'm afraid it will fade. I had a blue dress once, yes, just about that shade, and I wore it on a hot, sunny day, and—it was a pretty dress, and quite a lot of trouble to make—and first thing you know it was all faded! If it had faded evenly I wouldn't have minded so much, but it was so queer and streaky—I was so mortified! (To Friend) You remember the dress, Elizabeth.

L. G. M. F. (nodding)—Oh, yes! You mean the striped one with the sash? L. G. M.—No, it wasn't that one. You see, I have had several blue dresses. This one was plaided, and had little buttons. Made up your mind yet, Dorothy?

Little Girl (holding blue one in her hand)—I think this color's lovely. Single Lee had one of this color once. L. G. M. (laughing)—Yes, I remember. It lasted for about two days. Here, child, try the pink one on again. Turn around so that mother can see. Yes, that's nice. (To Clerk) Don't you think that is nice?

Clerk—They are both very becoming. She can't make a mistake which ever one she takes. L. G. M.—Well, I want her to be satisfied. She is the one to wear it, and besides, it's her birthday, you know, so I told her she could select it. Now this pink—

Little Girl (decisively)—I don't like the streamers, mamma. L. G. M.—The streamers? Why, child, that's the prettiest part of it! (To Friend)—Don't you think the streamers are pretty, Elizabeth?

L. G. M. F.—Indeed I do! I remember when I was a little girl just about Dorothy's age I was just crazy to have a hat with streamers. L. G. M.—You know, Dorothy, you're an odd little girl sometimes. Now most children would be delighted with those streamers. But if you don't want them—I'll tell you what we'll do—we'll cut them off! (To clerk): Couldn't we cut them off?

Clerk—Why, yes, you might do that, or else, if you prefer, you might just loop them up, or tie them in a pretty bow. L. G. M.—Oh, yes, that's what we'll do. You wear it the way it is for a time, and then when you get tired of it we'll just loop them up prettily somehow. It'll make it an altogether different hat. Now, Dorothy, I don't want to hurry you, but you know we've got a lot of errands to do yet. (To clerk): She's going to have a party. I think it's nice, don't you, to keep up these little celebrations?

Clerk—Yes, it's lovely. I think she is a very lucky little girl. L. G. M.—I sometimes think that she doesn't realize how nice she has it. Children don't, you know. Well, little girl, which is it to be? We mustn't take too much of this nice lady's time. (To Friend): Oh, I do love this pink hat! It would look so exquisite on her. . . . Well, Dorothy?

Little Girl—I like the blue one, but if you like the pink one better, mamma, I'll take that. L. G. M.—You're the one to wear it, you know, Dorothy. None of us is going to say a word. (To Friend): I think it's such good training for children to get to know their own minds. You're sure you like the pink one, Dorothy?

Little Girl—Um hm. L. G. M.—And you won't be sorry after you get it home? (Dorothy is silent.) L. G. M.—Because you know you've selected it all yourself! (To Clerk): Well, we will take this one. Thank you so much for all this trouble we've made you. But it will be such a pleasure to her hereafter to think she selected it all herself.

(Exit Mother, Little Girl and Friend, Mother carrying pink hat in bag.) The Pacific is fully a mile deeper than any other ocean.

BRIEF REMARKS

Equality causes no war.—Solon. Some mistake patience for sense.

A good example is the best sermon. Equivocation is first cousin to a lie.

An empty head contains many surprises. Italy has some 4,200,000,000 lemons a year.

Equity is half religion.—Turkish proverb. Many things lawful are not expedient.

He who goes on an occasional spree is better off. Some men do well by doing their best friends.

Most men who pay as they go are slow travelers. It is dead easy to find trouble and make excuses.

Each cat consumes on an average 90 birds a year. New York city has more than 100,000 clubwomen.

It often happens that a good talker is a poor thinker. The art of pleasing is the art of rising in the world.

Nothing is so painful as some men's efforts to be funny. Men who know it all are seldom able to furnish the proof.

Jokes on marriage are funny to those who are not married. Yes, Cordelia, advice should be well shaken before taken.

Honesty cannot be bought or sold—it is not marketable. To cease being a nuisance is the worthiest of reforms.

A grain of strychnine will embitter 600,000 gallons of water. Self-control does more for a man than government control.

From 1820 to 1910 nearly 28,000,000 immigrants came to us. In Iceland the mother is always the guardian of her children.

When argument ceases decayed eggs are depended on by some. Only a busy man can employ his spare time advantageously.

Hope enables a man to accomplish wonders—in his own mind. A spendthrift gets tight occasionally, but a miser is always tight.

If a man runs into debt he must either crawl out or stay in. Distance leads enchantment to one's view of many stage beauties.

No married woman can pass an old admirer without looking back. Women color their faces with blue and yellow paint in Greenland.

It's better to smile and be a villain than never to have smiled at all. A theory may be an impracticable plan of doing something impossible.

It's a good thing some people are not as good as they pretend to be. Summer girls are again vowing eternal fidelity until the end of the season.

Sometimes the race is to the swift, but more often it is to the bookmaker. All men may be born equal, but some get to be more thin-skinned than others.

If a man has to choose between a canary bird and a parrot he can't decide. Inability to answer an argument doesn't prove that the argument is a good one.

Humble men who admit their ignorance get credited with more ignorance than is theirs. Humanity is never so beautiful as when praying for forgiveness or else forgiving another.

To many people the most popular hot-weather drink is the one some other fellow pays for. To have what we want is riches; but to be able to do without is power.—George Macdonald.

Costa Rica is the married man's paradise. There is not a millinery store in all that country. Those who live when the millenium comes may be happier, but there won't be so much excitement.

Our idea of a true heroine is a married woman who doesn't say that she wishes she had remained single.
