RADIATORS

How to take care of them during the winter.

Why does your radiator burst the tubes while freezing? The cause of 90% of the frost broken radiators is on account of the cardboard you put in front extending from six to twelve inches from the bottom. If this cardboard which you think has such great virtue for protecting your radiator was hung from the top down, when you freeze your radiator it would not freeze the tubes. Here is what happens: When your radiator is filled and your engine started, cold air is drawn through the radiator above the card and the tubes where the air is being drawn through immediately freeze. This cuts off circulation, then the tubes back of the card begin freezing from the bottom up, with the result that you have a column of water in the tubes just below the upper edge of the card, this column of water being frozen above and below, as the freezing continues there is no outlet for the expansion it simply bursts the tubes. But when in trouble, Schmitt's Sheet Metal Works located at 244 1/2 Clinton Ave. N. just south of Central Ave. will give you first class Workmanship and Service as their equipment is second to none.
