CAR OWNERS—ATTENTION!
 If your car is going to be idle during the Winter Months, it is important that your battery be given proper care. Unless the battery is given attention the chemicals in it will operate to destroy it by sulphation. You are cautioned, therefore, not to permit your battery to commit suicide during the Winter Months while your car is idle.
 There are two methods of storing a battery, depending upon the requirements of each individual case. These methods are as follows:
WET STORAGE is so called because the battery is stored with the acid in it. In WET STORAGE the battery requires monthly attention, and must, therefore, be kept under competent supervision.
DRY STORAGE is ordinarily the preferable method. By this method a battery is disassembled after being fully charged. The plates are then stored dry. The chemical action is completely suspended and the battery is ready to start a new life when reassembled. Another advantage in Dry Storage is that the battery's internal condition is quickly revealed and no unwarranted cost entailed.
 Dale Bros. are thoroughly equipped for—and make a specialty of—taking care of automobile storage batteries in winter. This is done without discrimination—all batteries are handled regardless of their make.
 The cost of storage is reasonable, and is much more than offset by the many months of added life given to your battery. Dale Bros. ask you to "drop in, without obligation, and allow them to explain more fully how winter storage is beneficial to your battery."
