Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

TURNING CORNERS

THE very ease and speed with which you rush ahead, so agreeable while the road is smooth and clear, make it difficult sometimes to slow down and turn the corners in safety.

A straight course is easy to follow, but a devious way is hard and calls for all your strength and finer judgment in spite of your vaunted skill.

A few trifling words, a slip of the foot, a shifting of the eye or a broken troth and you are destitute of courage, in a perilous position from which it may take years to extricate yourself.

Friendships are irrevocably lost at the corners where you must turn to determine your future; where you find that you must curtail expenses and live a simpler life with less pleasure and more work.

Turning corners dampens the spirits of high-strung men and women and often narrows their views to so great an extent that they become mere corner loungers, of no use to themselves or to the community in which they exist.

The sunlight vistas of life have been darkened by the gathering clouds of adversity in which they unexpectedly plunged as they turned a sharp corner in an unfamiliar territory.

Like you, these victims of misfortune were comfortable and happy in the heyday of prosperity.

And like thousands of others, they miscalculated their strength and were hastily swept off their feet, bruised and maimed as they found themselves bereft of power and humiliated in pride.

In an atmosphere that stifles their ambition and fills their souls with remorse, they are like frightened children lost in the dark, afraid of the shadows and unable to move.

Yesterday they would have laughed at the plight of a friend who made an unfortunate turn at the corner; today, laughter and they are not on speaking terms.

Only the brave and true and merciful can hope to turn the corners on life's highway in security.

And if you will look into the lives of such persons you will find that they were early taught at a good mother's knee to put aside greed and selfishness, to call men brothers, to help the poor, to be charitable to the fallen, and to practice in their dealings with others the golden rule, that the corners might be turned without calamity, even in the hurrying twilight.

"USED" THOUGHTS

EMERSON, wisest of all American essayists, says somewhere that every man must sooner or later make up his mind that he and no one else must determine his future.

We can learn from others knowledge, methods, even wisdom.

Other men can teach us how to think, as they can teach us how to swim or play golf.

But they cannot swim for us, they cannot play golf for us, and they cannot think for us.

We all employ a great deal of thought that is not our own. That must be, for we should be foolish not to profit by the accumulated wisdom of those who have gone before.

But these "used" thoughts, while we must at times employ them, serve not at all to develop our minds.

And while we might get along fairly well through life without original thought, we should die little wiser than when we began, and contribute nothing whatever to the progress of the world.

All that is of value in education is learning how to think.

From biography we derive a great deal, but most of it consists in knowing how other men thought, and how their thought made their careers.

If we carry all our problems to others to solve for us, we shall some day be confronted with a great problem and lack the understanding of how to grapple with it.

And in that time there will be no one to help us, and we shall meet with a failure that may change for the worse the course of our lives.

Most of us will do anything rather than think, for thinking is labor of the hardest kind.

But it is the sort of labor that means development, that enables us to use our minds for our own advancement, that makes us resourceful and independent and not afraid of tackling whatever comes along.

There are small differences between the outsiders of our heads. There are tremendous differences between the insides of them. And those of us who have learned to think have developed machines which steadily and industriously through the years will work for our prosperity and our happiness. But those whose thoughts are second hand wonder why they never arrive.

CARRYING PACKAGES

"IT IS one of the wholesome signs of the age," says a member of the Department of Agriculture, "that people are breaking away from the idea that a perfect lady or gentleman never carried a package."

It is really hard to remember that such an opinion ever was held, and you may be sure if you know anyone who still clings to the notion that it is beneath his dignity to carry a bundle of any sort that that person is quite behind the times and has not kept pace with the times.

The only time when it is bad form to carry packages or bundles is when by doing so you might cause others annoyance or inconvenience. A woman should bear in mind that if she is going to be accompanied by a man, good breeding will demand that he carry any bundles or packages she may have. Sometimes a married woman on going out with her husband carries an unnecessary number of bundles feeling that she may carry these herself if she chooses. To insist on doing this will put her husband in a bad light, for he will appear to have neglected to offer to carry them.

Again when you are going to be conveyed to your destination in a friend's automobile you should not burden yourself with a lot of unwieldy packages unless you have been assured beforehand that your friend wishes to do so. If you have to travel in a crowded car or train, it is inconscient to carry bulky luggage that will add to the discomfort of the other travelers.

MY FORTUNE

PERHAPS I have no funds in sight,
But what is that to me
With all the gold of sunlight,
And the silver of the sea?

Perhaps I hold no titles to
Rich lands or mansions fine,
But overhead the skies of blue
With all their joys are mine.

And in my heart I hold a store
Of wealth in title clear
In coffers running o'er and o'er
With Love, and Hope, and Cheer.

Laws of health are simple. They consist in not enjoying anything a great deal.

Dansville Church Observes Feast Day

Dansville, N. Y., Aug. 17.—Tuesday, the feast of the Assumption, the greatest of all the festivals which the Catholic Church observes in honor of the Blessed Virgin, had a two-fold significance in the celebration at St. Mary's Church as it was the patronal feastday of the parish. The services exulted in jubilant praise and thanksgiving that the queenly Virgin was raised even to the throne of God, exalted above all creatures, crowned with an honor as befitting only a mother, and adorned by the Divine one with a glory that belonged only to the Son.

In his sermons the Rev. Leo G. Holschneider beautifully word-pictured how solemn was the day on which the Blessed Virgin was taken out of this mortal life into the heavenly habitations of celestial bliss. The Immaculate Virgin matured in her heavenly disposition and untainted by earthly desires did not return to dust, but today, She, God's living Ark of the Covenant, which contained the Creator Himself, reposes in the Temple of the Lord not made by human hands. It is impossible for the Christian adorer of the Incarnate God to give His Blessed Mother more honor interior or exterior than is her due. If you believe in honoring your own mother, believe that the Son of God believes in honoring His. Speaking from the cloud of agony which overhung the cross her Divine Son said: "Son, behold Thy mother,"—thus bequeathing her to all, hence her name is embroidered on the bright mantle of the whole world. She is a mother to all, procuring benefits for each from her Son. In your trials and temptations have recourse to Mary. Follow the Way of the Cross with Mary and you will be crowned with Mary. If your soul hungers and thirsts, call to Mary, she will give you the bread of heaven, containing in itself all sweetness; that fruit from the tree of life which bestows life eternal. Implore her aid and assistance and heed the exhortation—"Heavenward to the heart—I am born for the eternal."

Adventures of the Thrift Family

At last one long night came to Robby Thrift, and with all the bills, they were then quite adrift.
But they loved the small boy and they wanted to plan.
To bring him up right as a big splendid man. One night after dinner, with the kiddie in bed, "Pa" took "Ma", Thrift, and then and there said:

"You've had your tea, and I've had my way, And we've never known just how we could pay. We thought what we wanted, regardless of price. To talk of our finances—that wasn't quite nice. Now, that is all over—don't think me a crank. But I'm going to start an account at the bank."

"Our debts we will pay, if it takes a full year. And we'll hold up our heads, without worry or fear. We will buy what we know we can pay for real soon. Without asking credit 'til a year from next June. Each Saturday night, whether rainy or sunny, You'll see me run down to the bank with my money."
