CARRIED "HONESTY" TOO FAR

Trusted Clerk Rather Overdid It, and Lost the Confidence of His Employer.

Cash registers became an institution as a means of compelling honesty among employees handling money. There was a time when their installation was taken as an affront by every clerk concerned, but a new generation has accepted them as a matter of course. That they still have their use in the original sense, however, was demonstrated recently by one employer—a grocer—who was telling his story over the counter the other evening to a related customer.

"Last summer," the grocer said, "my family was living down at the beach and I used to leave early in order to get down there for a late dinner. I had a clerk that I trusted to lock up and put the money in the safe. Naturally the cash register would show in the morning what he had rung up.

"For a few days I thought it was working fine. He was a good clerk and I thought he was honest. Then when I got to thinking about it I decided he was too honest. For ten days that register and the cash agreed to a penny. Now that's better than I could make it do myself. It ain't natural.

"Then I decided to try a little scheme. Just before I left I rung up $2.75 on the register and put nothing in the till. Next morning the cash and the register agreed as usual. That was enough for me. Any man who is so honest he will make up mistakes out of his pocket must have plenty of money to do it with.

"No, he isn't working for me now."—New York Evening Sun.

Of Little Use.
"The lady ain't got no old clothes to spare, but she offers us an old grass rag."

"It will be of but little use to me, I'm no Hawaiian dancer."

In the Country.
"So this is the country?"
"Yes."
"I haven't seen a stile."
"No; they're out of style."

There is much insight in ancient books, but the wit is mostly archaic.

Shopping sense means that the wise and economical woman searches out and patronizes that where she may find the best of merchandise the highest grades in all standard things, let this same woman when the time comes to go, say to New to make her home, not to forget to look up and be just as eager to get value received for her money by having the best of movers take care of her furniture. Call Stone 5499-L. I am sure you will get prompt and satisfactory service.

"DEATH AGONIES" PURE MYTH

Last Illness May Be Painful, but the Moment of Dissolution Is Without Suffering.

Recent study has led physiologists to the conclusion that the brain may live for 20 minutes or half an hour after a person has apparently "given up the ghost."

The heart, taken out of the body, will continue to beat for 24 hours if a stream of oxygenated blood be kept flowing through it.

Death from loss of blood is attended by no pain. The ancients, appreciating this fact, commonly had resort to "opening the veins" when they sought to commit suicide.

Drowning is an easy death, described by persons who have survived the process as "like falling asleep." It is said to be more painful to be resuscitated than to drown.

In the "dying hour" the sense of smell falls first, then taste, sight, touch and finally hearing.

The "death struggle" or "death agony" is an imaginary phenomenon. Convulsive movements usually occur toward the last, but they are mere nervous reactions of which the dying person is unconscious. A last illness may be painful, but death is painless.

One person in every 1,000 dies a "natural" death—that is to say, of old age. The remaining 999 die of disease.

It often happens in extreme old age that a marked weakening of the mental faculties is observable. Persons thus afflicted are said to be in their "dotage." They have to be cared for like small children. It is a trouble due to structural disintegration of the brain, which, like any other organ, is liable to wear out. As a matter of fact the brain, in these persons, wore out before their bodies.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.
