Delightful possibilities lie in the judicious placing of mirrors. Try, for instance, hanging a mirror in a dark corner and observe the magic it works! The room seems fairly transformed as the mirror catches the eye and blinks mischievously from its corner. A mirror here or a mirror there adds a touch that makes a room a complete artistic picture.

There are no better mirrors made today than those made right here in our own country. Perfectly smooth surfaced and clear plate glass is selected, and the silvering is done with painstaking care. For brilliance, crystal will satisfy and reach the right spot of cleanliness, perfection of workmanship and the equality of true reflection, plate mirrors made by us are unsurpassed.

He Named Himself Up Firmly.

The man who "painted himself into a corner" when he was renewing the kitchen floor has been elected in unwavering by a citizen of Oak Harbor Ohio. We agree with the Chicago Tribune, which tells the story, in thinking that he got himself into a much more distressing predicament than his famous predecessor. Instead of getting up on the roof that he was making, John stood on a timber in the attic and thrust his head up between two rafters. In order to nail on some boards. Having driven his last nail, he tossed the hammer to the ground, and then discovered that he could not withdraw his head from between them. Imagination shrinks from contemplating what John must have gone through while he was being released.—Youth's Companion.

High Place for Lewis Cass

Those who pushed the frontier westward were themselves the products of frontier conditions," says William B. Shaw in the American Review of Reviews. "Such a leader as Lewis Cass, a native of New Hampshire, who went out as a youth to the settlements that were soon to be organized into the state of Ohio, took part in lawmaking there, served as a volunteer officer in the war of 1812, was appointed governor of Michigan territory, and for many years was engaged in the difficult task of setting up an American form of government in regions that had barely emerged from the wilderness stage.

That Lewis Cass was in after years a United States senator from Michigan, a member of cabinets, a diplomat
