THE GLOVE CITY OF AMERICA
Located in the Adirondacks 812 feet above sea level in a dry and exhilarating atmosphere is Gloversville, N. Y. This picturesque city is surrounded by beautiful lakes and woods from which the skins for my Ladies and Gents gloves are procured. His story relates that the Indians finding his particular locality being the ideal location for curing of hides and near the source of raw material had established an extensive curing station and tannery there long before white man trod the ground.
The city is conceded by far as being the leading glove city of the United States and Rochester people are extremely fortunate in having a direct channel from manufacturer to consumer in the Gloversville Glove Store located at 107 Main St. West. This store is prepared to have your skins cured, tanned and made up direct for you in one you are a hatter.
The very latest thing in gloves is obtainable here at all times and at direct prices which is practically impossible for the average retail store to compete with.

Mr. Horn and his able employees are able to tackle any kind of a plumbing or heating job, be it large or small, he has had a great deal of experience with large apartments and public buildings, churches, schools and the like.

CONDENSERS ALLOW VARIATION.
Owners of receivers using spiderweb induction coils of fixed position are restricted to a particular wave length, and even if the coils are mounted for coupling, the range is still limited unless variable condensers are used. The best arrangement is to place one variable condenser in series with the primary and shunt another across the secondary. This affords results equal to those obtainable with a variocoupler.
