NATIONAL TAXI GIVES PRIVATE LIVERY SERVICE

There is a big difference between a regular taxicab business and a private livery according to the National Taxicab Company 49-91 Franklin St. The firm explains this difference as follows:
The National Taxicab Company renders a strictly private livery service. They operate subject to call only which means that the office is in direct touch with every patron, besides assuring the patron of a heated car right out of the garage instead of one that has become thoroughly chilled by staying on the street waiting for a pick-up.
There is a difference between the regular taxicab business and a private livery which the public does not quite understand. In a private livery such as that conducted by the National Taxicab Company the Chauffeurs are selected with great care so that one can at all times feel perfectly safe riding in the cars and can entrust their dearest friends in them.
Cars are always equipped with windshield cleaners and chains which are owned by the company instead of the poor chauffeurs, who cannot afford to get the best and give them the care needed.
National cars are cleaned thoroughly every day and once a week are fumigated, hence the public is not taking any chance of contracting disease. The National Taxicab Company tend strictly to the office end of the business thus ensuring each customer the best individual attention possible.

MOST DEADLY OF POISONS
Bacillus of Botulism Admitted to Be Worse Than Any Other Known to Science.
Experiments carried on at the Harvard Medical school indicate that the poison produced by the bacillus of botulism is very much more deadly than prussic acid, although fortunately it is not so rapid in operation. The poison occurs very rarely, but when it does usually several persons eat the food and are killed by it. The germ that produces the poison was discovered by a Belgian investigator in 1896. In 22 years there have only been 150 cases of illness from this cause, but 111 persons have died from it. Sausages formerly were supposed to be the chief cause of botulism. In the cases of the last few years other foods have been involved, including string beans, cottage cheese, corn, asparagus, ripe olives and spinach. It also has been attributed to turkey, chicken and fish. While the victims frequently show the symptoms in from 16 to 18 hours they do not always develop before 36 hours. Weakness, dizziness, headache and nausea first make their appearance. There is difficulty of vision. Patients sometimes see double. The eyelids often droop, and control over them is lost, so that the sufferer can see only by lifting them with his fingers. These effects flow from the attack of the poison on a particular brain center. Other brain centers become involved. Swallowing becomes difficult. The muscles controlling the voice become paralyzed. The paralysis spreads to the lips, tongue and respiration, and the victim gasps for breath. In the end paralysis of the respiration and the heart becomes complete and there is death.—Scientific American.
