Straight Silica Glass.
 A deposit of silica mineral of volcanic origin has been found in Czechoslovakia, which can be used directly in the manufacture of glass without the need of adding any of the other common ingredients used in making the glass batch. This silica mineral is said to resemble lava and it is understood that the deposits are very large and that steps are being taken to utilize them commercially.—Chemical Trade Journal.

Homo Sapiens.
 The boy and girl fell in love. Secretly, the boy was glad that, although the girl was a trifle plump, she would never resemble her mother, who was a rather stupid, fat old dowager. They have a daughter now. Secretly, her father is glad that, although his daughter is a trifle plump, she will never resemble her mother, who is a rather stupid, fat old dowager.—Life.

MESSAGE FROM THE ROMANS

French Soldiers Found That Conquering Legions Had Preceded Them Through Pass in Algeria.
 The overseas veteran may well glory in his achievements. That is one of the rewards of valor. If at times he is unfair in his contentions, it is usually for lack, not of generosity, but of perspective. The vaunting doughboy should ponder the story of the French soldiers who during the early days of the French occupation of Algeria worked their way through a pass that until then was thought to be inaccessible. They were, says Mr. M. W. Hilton-Simpson in "Among the Hill Folk of Algeria," naturally proud of what they had done and asked the commanding officer to allow them to carve the names of their regiments and the date on some suitable rock.

He readily assented, and they began to search. Almost at once they found a boulder that seemed to be ideally placed for their purpose; moreover, one side of it was flat. The soldiers began to clean it preparatory to immortalizing their exploit. But on closer examination they found that the rock was not so smooth as they thought. In fact, there appeared to be lettering on it. Imagine their amazement when one of them who was accustomed to decipher inscriptions announced that the rock already bore the name of a unit of a great disciplined army—an army the tradition of which had been as glorious as their own. For the timeworn letters informed the Frenchmen not only that the pass had been traversed, but that a road had been built through it by the Sixth legion of the Roman army during the reign of Antoninus Plus more than 16 centuries before!—Youth's Companion.
