Aerobell Electric Vacuum Clothes Washer.

The Aerobell Electric Vacuum Washer sold by the Wallace Electric Company, 405 Main Street East, embodies the improvements for which you have been waiting: Aluminum wringer frame, new type safety release, big round copper tub with full opening, and only three legs for steadiness on uneven floors.

Air pressure and suction in the vacuum cups actually draw the soap suds through the fabrics. You can hardly believe how quickly and thoroughly the air-cushioned vacuum cups clean, and they can't harm the most delicate articles. There is no belt, and the mechanism is, under the tub, out of the way.

The Aerobell is simple in construction and built to stand years of hard work. It is designed to reduce effort to a minimum. You can depend upon it day after day, year after year.

The cost of operating the Aerobell is but a few cents for the average family washing.

A gas water heater can be furnished with the Aerobell if desired, at a small additional cost.

If you would like a demonstration of this washer just call at the Wallace Electric, and they will be very glad to tell you all about this machine.

THE GENESEE BOOTERY

"BURROWS" PERIL, THE LAND

Much of England Undermined by the Drain on the Resources of its Coal Fields.

According to an English paper, England, Scotland and Wales together have produced some 8,500,000,000 tons of coal. Small wonder, then, that these countries are full of huge holes caused by the abstraction of this mass of mineral.

Indeed, so many holes are there, and so much is the land falling in, that in the West Riding of Yorkshire the local council is seeking power from parliament to make mine and royalty owners pay something toward draining the sunken districts.

Doncaster coalfield is of comparatively recent date, but so badly has this district been affected by the mining operations that experts say that Doncaster will stand on a morass in ten years' time. Even now a large area of land has been marked off as quite unfit for building purposes.

From Wakefield to Globe, practically along the whole course of the Don the country is more or less flooded, and what might be fruitful land simply goes to waste. Roads, too, in this part frequently suffer—and they cost something like $17,000 a mile to resurface.

Naturally, the Black country has suffered a great deal from subterranean workings. They have often caused whole districts to sink, and a few years ago the high street of Cradley Heath dropped suddenly five feet.

The solution of the problem rests in adequate draining of the subsided areas. Mining is proceeding all the time—drainage ought to follow to counteract the bad effects of boring and blasting.—London Mail.

SAVES TIME IN HARVESTING

American Ingenuity Has Produced Engine That Has Been Bought Throughout the Centuries.

Sugar cane is harvested today in the same primitive manner that it was thirty centuries ago. The harvester cuts one stalk at a time, trims away the leaves and throws it aside. American ingenuity has attacked this problem. An efficient machine which resembles a grain reaper has been built. The sugar cane harvester does the work of a hundred men and does it much better. Profiting by the experience gained in developing grain harvesters, the inventor of the cane harvester may be said to have started in where the early inventors of similar machines ended.

The cane harvester is built somewhat upon the lines of a dinosaur. It is about the size of a modern grain harvester, although narrower for its height. It is driven by a gasoline engine and guided by a single operator, and is mounted on broad tractors so that it can pass with equal dexterity over rough or marshy ground at undiminished speed. At the forward end is a narrow nose-like prow which moves slowly but steadily through the thickest growth. The stalks of sugar cane are cut by two circular knives placed close to the ground. As the stalks are severed they are gathered in by a series of mechanical fingers and carried to the stripping machinery further astern.

In cutting sugar cane by hand the stalk is severed eight inches or more from the ground. The harvester cuts it within less than one inch of the ground. Since the lower part of the stalk is richest in sugar it is estimated that the stalks cut by machinery are 10 per cent richer than those cut by hand.
