Romance of Stolen Mail Bag.
The English post office department maintains an official of the nature of a historian whose duty is, among other things, to collect and record various data about the service. One of the most curious exhibits of the department is a time-worn oil-canvas mail bag—a reminiscence of a daring mail robbery. This bag is over 100 years old, and was forcibly taken by an armed footpad, one evening in February, 1798, from the postboy who was carrying the mails between York and Selby. A reward was offered for the apprehension of the robber, but no trace of him or the mail bag was found until nearly eighty years later. The discovery then came about in a most singular manner. In 1876 an old way-side inn was being demolished at Churchill near Selby, and in the rafters the workmen found, among other things, the long-lost mail bag, it having evidently been hidden there by the highwayman of 1798, after being spoiled of its contents.

Dogs' Limitations.
An investigation is being made as to the truth of an Arab assertion that dogs cannot follow the trail of a naked person. A number of writers vouched for the correctness of the contention and proffered the results of their own experiences. One of the letters received was from a French officer who had spent many years among the Arabs. He says in his letter: "Once when I found myself with a moving column in Morocco, a sentry of mine was stabbed no farther than 30 feet from my tent by three Arabs, who came in the night, entirely naked, wishing to steal a gun. Two very good watch dogs lay in my tent, but neither moved; and there were other dogs in the camp, but all were perfectly still as the Arabs came and went." The writer of the letter argues that this fact proves the point, but adds that Arabs themselves declare they are unable to explain it.
