Dealers Urge Use of Small Coal

With the present high price of Anthracite coal there is a growing demand for some way in which the average householder may cut down the size of his coal bill. There are of course many types of grates which can be used to advantage to burn the steam sizes of Anthracite, but for the average home these are too expensive to be of value. Though in apartment houses and office buildings they are coming into and more general use.

The McGarvey Coal Company, Inc. with offices at 8 Reynolds Arcade has experimented to quite an extent with what is known as Buckleweat coal for small hot air heaters and steam heaters, and the results have been very satisfactory. The main difficulty with burning small coal or pea coal seems to be the lack of storage equipment in the average home.

It is advantageous to bank with the smaller coal and to mix a small portion of it with the furnace coal, except in the coldest weather when it is necessary to use the large coal alone. When the price of the fine coal is almost six dollars less than stove coal it is well to consider it to see that a considerable advantage may be effected through the use of three or four tons of stove or egg coal. Many people are using small coal this way and are getting a good or better results than ever as a considerable less cost.

Leave your orders early for delivery as coal can not always be obtained on short notice. The McGarvey Coal Company are to be relied upon for dependable coal and their prices are as low as the other dealers. Call them at Main 1841.

Maybe the scientists will learn to grow flowers by electric light, but cabbages so raised would be short of vitamins, and storing up vitamins is the best thing that cabbages do.
