BATTERY MURDER
Some Good Advice To Auto Owners

Back in the days of '49 many a gold-seeker died of thirst on western plains, but you don't hear of such things nowadays.

Yet we see many cases of death for lack of water, say the Long Life Battery Station, 28 1/2 Prospect street, Main 8461. They are battery deaths, they add.

The one thing most likely to bring a storage battery to an untimely end is thirst. Many a battery is expected to travel indefinitely without water, but none will do it.

A battery must be kept filled above the tops of the insulators to allow for the evaporation that will take place. Summer heat and long trips will evaporate the water in the battery solution very quickly and that is why so many batteries die of thirst in summer particularly. Charging of the battery by the generator creates heat in itself besides the influence of the weather temperature.

The simplest and surest means of committing battery murder is to use it without giving it water. Without water the plates become hard and are rapidly overheated by the charging current. This may cause the plates to buckle and completely ruin the battery.

Filling a battery too full is almost as bad as not filling it enough. If filled above the right point, the acid solution will overflow and eat away the wood case and injure any part of the car with which it comes in contact.

If the specific gravity of the solution becomes less and less, the car owner may be deceived into believing that the acid has evaporated. What really happens is this: As the battery discharges, the acid in the solution is absorbed by the plates. If this process continues until the battery is fully discharged, the solution is almost all water. Recharging without a fire for a few days, the battery forces the acid out of the plates into the solution again. No acid, only the water evaporates, and all the owner need do is see that the battery is supplied with distilled water to replace what is lost by evaporation. Acid should never be added by the car owner.

If car owners will remember this one point about their batteries, there will be a great deal less mortality among automobile batteries.

If there is anything wrong with your battery, take it to the Long Life Battery Station, and you will be more than pleased with the results.

Mr. Frank Gallagher is the president of the concern and Mr. H. V. Conser is secretary and treasurer of the company. They have been in the coal business for years and the name of Gallagher always means good reliable coal.

No matter what the size of the order the delivery is the same and in selecting the coal taken with small orders as well as with large. All kinds of anthracite and bituminous are kept on hand, chestnut, stove, pea, egg, any of them ready for immediate delivery. The uncertainty of the weather does not allow householders take a chance on the coal bin that has become empty. One should at all really happens is this: As the battery discharges, the acid in the solution is absorbed by the plates. If this process continues until the battery is fully discharged, the solution is almost all water. Recharging without a fire for a few days, the battery forces the acid out of the plates into the solution again. No acid, only the water evaporates, and all the owner need do is see that
