Why Only ONE Pair of Glasses?

When an accident happens to them you are helpless until they are repaired. Your optometrist, using all the speed such work allows, cannot repair them until your eyes have suffered.

It is more important to have two pairs of glasses than two suits, gowns, hats, etc.

Replete with new features and a program that, it is believed will surpass any hitherto presented by the C. Y. M. A. While the regulation first part will form no small portion of the entertainment to be offered to the friends who annually patronize and enjoy the C. Y. M. A. shows, the committee, of, which Leon J. Fischer is chairman, is confident that the various other features will include enough variety to make this a banner minstrel show of all that have been produced by the C. Y. M. A.

Heading the olio's, which are usually presented to the audience after the minstrel proper in amature shows, will be, the team of Schoeneman and Flowerday in a comedy skit, representing the bright side of, "Life's Darkest Moments", They will be followed by a, "Musicale Pastime" presented by Frederick J. Bauer and Louis Moore, a violin and saxophone duet. Johnny McManus, who the public will remember, a part in the C. Y. M. A. minstrels last year, will also appear in an olio act, representing Characters of Importance followed immediately by the C. Y. M. A. quartette composed of Albert Mura, J. Arthur Schiefen, Herbert Mura and Sylvester Schrank, in a few numbers and solos, that will open up onto the first scene of the minstrel.

William Schlueter, will be interlocutor and will introduce the following as end men:—George Wolf, Gerard Nunnold, Roy Flowerday, C. (Red) Schoeneman, John McManus and Irvin (Doc) Schoeneman. Among the soloists are Robert Bond and John H. Bauer. Members taking part in the chorus are as follows;—Herbert B. Hammes, Leo Eckert, Frank Hammes jr., Gregory Callahan, Lester McCormick, John O'Connor, Aldine Logan, Francis Frank, George Blickwede, John Major, Francis Hartman, Fred Kuhn, Charles Zimber, Rufus Maier, Howard Lewis, James Hilbert, and Gregory Curran.
