 I think it is the darlinest shop a young mother was heard to say the other day as she gazed on the attractive frocks and suits in the window of The Children's Shop, which is located at 156 East Ave.
 This shop acts as first aid to fastidious mothers in search of small people's attire. Just arrived are smart little tailored warm coats for the cool spring days, the dearest suits of wash materials for exceedingly small young men, and a variety of entrancing tub frocks for feminine tots made of pretty gingham, volles dimities, etc. Mothers who think their children must have the best should see also the new youngsters hats at the Children's shop
 Whether the fastidious women of the city have babies or no, they must when passing up East Ave. pay more than a glance to the always interesting and charmingly arranged window of this shop. Some days it is green, with lovely little suits in white and the soft green shade, and exquisite dresses so cool looking for summer in the same shade, with daffodils for the flowers. Other days it is rose pink, and white silk coats and bonnets in the midst of fresh spring snapdragons. I'm going into the store one finds all sorts of smart dresses for infants and up to twelve years. Drop in and see the large variety

Mute's Prize Hen Lays Eggs of Phenomenal Size
 Kansas City, Kan.—W. H. Cunningham, poultry producer, near Rosedale, is displaying a carton of eggs averaging 8 1/2 by 7 inches the long way and middle circumference. Cunningham is a duck and clam. He writes attention in a written conversation to dimensions of eggs laid by Betty, prize buff Orpington hen, belonging to members of a Kansas City, Kan. fire station.
 Betty won second prize at the Heart of America poultry show last year.

Carrier Pigeon Acts as Blackmailer's Aid
 The legend of the carrier pigeon is one of gallantry, of romance, of superior to beauty in distress, of information between lovers, of comfort to be longed for, of dauntless heart and cleaving wing through high adventure and deadly peril.
 When one thinks of the praises and honors that have been won by that excellent bird ever since ancient man learned to turn its priceless accomplishment to his own service, one shudders at the thought of what our "practical" criminal classes would do to the homer's reputation if they found it possible to use the bird for nefarious purposes.
 Fortunately there are obstacles to the use of homing pigeons as black-mail collectors, as a young man in Queens discovered to his cost. The bird that he, by way of a "practical joke," had caused to be delivered to a prosperous citizen of his acquaintance, with an anonymous demand for $1,000, was trailed by detectives to its purchaser and the blighted joker was arrested. If he had seen himself in imagination as the suddenly affluent pioneer of a new and winged get-rich-quick system, his dream was cruelly shattered. The bird with which he is charged with playing Eagin is held as a material witness against him but without a stain on its own character.—New York Sun and Globe.

Germans Ride on Trains to Keep From Freezing
 Scores of persons in Berlin ride on the trains to keep warm. A cheap monthly ticket entitles a man to as many rides as he desires. Thus he does not have to buy coal to heat his home. Coal prices in Berlin are so high that the poor people cannot buy.
