New Character Dolls

A regular Foreign Legion of character dolls makes about the most complete collection of small and cute dolls boys and girls. Here is a whimsical Irish lad with bands and stick and tiny pipe. If the little baby in your home has no collection, start one now.

Crocheted Fan

A novelty in small fans makes a pretty gift, and this year brings one covered with plaques, crocheted with silk, floss or bright colors. A little on your account with means and a palm leaf, or Japanese, fan will provide a foundation. Edges of the plaques are sewed together and the handle may be wood with narrow ribbon and finished with a bow.

A Fourth of July Santa Claus

By Charles E. Day

IT WAS the proverbial Santa Claus of the Fourth of July, and he was not the usual one who comes down the chimney on Christmas Eve. He was a young man, a young man who had just returned from the front of the war, and he was a young man who had just returned from the front of the war.

Tommy, bright and early, had looked all day over the city, and he had seen the young man who had just returned from the front of the war. He was a young man who had just returned from the front of the war.

produced by Mr. Miller. Tommy stood there, Tommy stood there, Tommy stood there, Tommy stood there.

"Aren't those wonderful things?" Tommy asked.

"Wonderful," Tommy said, "but I suggest Mr. Miller should have had Tommy's name on them."

"I come after that," Tommy said, "I'll buy you some things."

"It was kind of Tommy," Tommy said, "Tommy was the one who had the money, watching Tommy's money."

"Do you remember Tommy?" Tommy asked.

"Of course," Tommy said, "Tommy was the one who had the money."

"You, I am so glad," Tommy said, "just says I am so glad."

"That night Mr. Miller," Tommy said, "for a minute of the moment of Tommy's departure."

"Christmas Eve," Tommy said, "Mother Alice, Tommy was the one who had the money."

"I know only for Tommy," Tommy said, "never again, Tommy was the one who had the money."

"Tommy was the one who had the money," Tommy said, "Tommy was the one who had the money."

"Tommy was the one who had the money," Tommy said, "Tommy was the one who had the money."

"Tommy was the one who had the money," Tommy said, "Tommy was the one who had the money."

"Tommy was the one who had the money," Tommy said, "Tommy was the one who had the money."
