N. C. W. C. Service Reviewed by Italian For French Writers

By M. Massiani
 (Paris Correspondent, N. C. W. C. News Service)
 Paris, Dec. 18.—The N. C. W. C. News Service was given great honor these last few days before the French Writers. During the Catholic Writers Week, an Italian journalist who has lived in Paris for many years, M. Domenico Russo, who reviewed the press outside of France, showed the element of progress which the N. C. W. C. Service represented for the Catholic papers of the United States. He praised the judicious plan of this service and likewise the great informative and documentary value of the correspondence received in Washington from the leading capitals of the world.
 Catholic Writers Week this year took as its subject "Catholics and Journalism." One day was devoted to studying the duties and the situation of Catholics with regard to the great newspapers, and Father du Passage, in particular, gave a lesson on the condition under which a Catholic should give or refuse his co-operation with neutral newspapers.
 Another day was given over to a study, by experts on religious news, of the qualities which religious information should possess in a daily paper and practical means of improving and developing this news in the future.
 Literary criticism, dramatic criticism, artistic criticism and the Catholic school of journalism were some of the other objects of discussion. The week began with Mass celebrated at the Catholic Institute and a "De Profundis" for the writers who had died during the past year. It was attended by many members of the Academy, among others Mgr. Baudrilart, M. Paul Bourget, Rene Bazin, Henry Bordeaux, Georges Goyau, Pierre de Nolhac, Henri Lavedan and Henri de la Gorce.
 Cardinal Dubois presided at the closing session, at which the Director of "Le Correspondent," M. Edouard Trogan, defined the qualities of the Catholic journalist. He spoke of the heavy responsibility imposed upon a writer who, in addition to being a writer and a newspaper man is also a Catholic, a word which alone implies numerous qualities in the person who bears it. He laid particular stress on the quality of "good faith." There can be no dispensation from good faith, he said, either toward our enemies, our adversaries, or any one whatsoever, on any pretext.

Daughter of Armagh's Protestant Prelate Praises Card. Logue

Dublin, Dec. 19.—Miss Alexander of Armagh, whose father was Protestant Archbishop of Armagh, in a letter to the Armagh District Nursing Association, pays the following tribute to the memory of Cardinal Logue:
 "I can never forget that one day very shy, but very determined, I went and asked to see the Cardinal. I was kindly received, and listened to with patience and sympathy. From that day a community of interest and a knowledge of the desire of both sides, in spite of differences on vital subjects, to help the sick poor of all denominations made a bond between us that might justly be called a bond of real friendship.
 "That bond led the Cardinal to speak publicly of me and my work in such a kind and chivalrous way as could never be forgotten.
 "It now urges me to add my memories of a fine Irish character, of a distinguished fellow-countryman. His counsel became helpful to me in many dangers and difficulties of the organization.
 "I realize strongly today that the flourishing state of the Association owed much to his tact and wisdom. When I visited him on his hill, or on the rare occasions when he came to my father's house, it seemed to me that to the simplicity born of his early life and to his general character were added something of the astuteness of a statesman.
 "But over all was the kindly light of his love for humanity and the bright sunshine of true Christianity."
 After referring to his love for animals and birds, she proceeds: "There was his appreciation of the beautiful as carried out in his cathedral, a crowning joy and probably the only pride of his life.
 "There was also his adventurous spirit, his intense love for the sea, with its calm, sheltered bays in her northern loch and its turbulent distances; there was his love, greater still, for the country of his birth and life-work, the country for which he wished true patriot peace in her borders; above all, there was his love of mankind and his tenderness towards all who suffered."

The present archbishop, Dr. Keating, in making this announcement at Wigan, said he cherishes the ambition of consecrating the cathedral himself. He paid a tribute to his people for raising so large a sum despite poverty and unemployment.

World's Three Senior Bishop Are British

London, Dec. 19.—The world's three senior bishops are British, remarks a Catholic paper, commenting on the death of Cardinal Logue. The oldest bishop in the world is Msgr. Redwood, Archbishop of Wellington, New Zealand, who was consecrated in 1874. Cardinal Logue was consecrated five years later. Second in seniority is Msgr. Isley, Archbishop of Macri, the retired Archbishop of Birmingham. He was consecrated on December 4, 1879. In episcopal consecration he is the senior by two weeks of Msgr. Lacy, the present Bishop of Middlesbrough, who was consecrated on December 18 of the same year.

Policy of Herriott Resented at Great Catholic Meetings

Paris, Dec. 18.—Numerous meetings protesting against the projects of M. Herriott are held every Sunday throughout all the French provinces under the patronage of the National Catholic Federation, of which General de Castelnau is the head.
 The largest of these meetings was held at Folgoet, in Brittany, a town which possesses a famous shrine. Fifty-two thousand peasants met there to affirm their determination of avoiding a renewal of persecution.
 At Quimper, in the same department, 20,000 men met on the same day, marching in procession, singing the "Credo" and the hymn "Nous voulons Dieu" (We Want God).
 Recently 15,000 men met at La Roche-sur-Ion and 18,000 at Bayonne. And the great demonstration held at Strasbourg by 40,000 persons has not been forgotten.
