Curiosities Found in Prague Button Museum

"Button, button, who's got the button?" They know in Prague where buttons are to be found, for there is a button museum in the Czechoslovak capital in which every form and type of button ever manufactured or wrought by hand is on exhibit. The button museum is one of the most unique institutions of its kind in the world, according to the New York World.

The museum was founded by a button manufacturer named Henry Waldes. Within a few years the institution has so expanded that it fills two floors of a large house in the suburb of Wrschowitz.

A study of the materials used in itself most worth while. There are buttons of gold, of silver, ivory, bronze, porcelain, of precious stones such as turquoise, opal, carnel, etc. Some buttons date back 3,000 years before Christ. The flashiest and showiest buttons are those of the Eighteenth century, when Europe seemed to enjoy rare luxury.

The most gruesome buttons are the so-called poison buttons, containing a tiny sharp of poison and surmounted by a sharp stud. In the days of political assassinations it was an easy thing for a man attending a high society function, such as a ball, to approach his adversary and, in a crowd, to brush by him in such a way that the button scratched his skin. Into this rent in the skin the contents of the button would then flow with fatal consequences.

BRIEFS FROM BILLVILLE

The first spring lightning hit a church steeple during service, and woke up the sleepers.

There'll never be a chance to send the devil to the chain gang on a charge of idling and loitering.

The reason some folks don't answer when Opportunity knocks is that they mistake him for a bill collector.

People who claim that they have treasure in heaven are not willing to go there to collect the interest on it.

With the high-class folks it is called the "gout," but with the Lord's poor it is known as "swell-foot rheumatism."—Atlanta Constitution

Chas. Schied & Sons Monuments Lead Rest.

There always comes a time in the history of every family when it becomes necessary for considering the question of erecting a suitable monument, headstone or marker upon the grave of a loved one.

Fortunately, death is not a frequent visitor in any family and so people as a general proposition know little or nothing about such things and almost invariably are at a loss where to choose such monuments.

There is one firm, however, which by its excellent work, has achieved so fine a reputation that it is easily recognized among the leaders in its business in this section of the country.

This is Chas. Schied & Sons, situated at 1142 Mt. Hope Avenue, Stone 3974. This firm has done and is doing notable work in its line and many of its beautiful monuments, headstones and markers are now standing as graceful and decorous memorials to those who have died and are buried in Monroe County cemeteries.

Chas. Schied & Sons operate in a high class manner. The executives of the firm will be glad at any time to be of real assistance to those who find it necessary to put a monument, headstone or marker upon the grave of a loved one.

They will gladly give the benefit of their experience and knowledge of these factors to those who find it necessary to consult them. The work will be done right and prices quoted will be right, too.

Broadcasting Education

A $20,000 radio broadcasting station is to be erected at Kansas State Agricultural college, Manhattan. With the University of Kansas building a similar station, the state is claiming first place in broadcasting stations in state institutions. It is expected by staging "contests in the air" that listeners will experience some of the thrills of the onlookers and that it may be one of the means of bridging the gap between the "town and the gown."—Chicago Post.

Giant in Giant State

Fred Shrender of Jewell City, Kan., is the tallest man in his state, in all probabilities, as his claim to being the Kansas giant goes unprotected. He is six feet nine inches tall, and he is a hard-working farmer. He weighs 250 pounds and has no desire to enter the prize ring.—Chicago News.

Never Brought Under Sway of Civilization

The fact that only five names figure upon the map of Lake Edward, in East Africa—isolated specks in the white blank of the unknown, testifies to its remoteness and evil reputation. The name of the country is Changu, in which the natives of Bankola are famed as cannibals. The "Ba-Chang" file their teeth to a point. They are all on evil terms with their neighbors. Large tracts of country have been wholly depopulated by raids of cannibal peoples from the northwest Dark forest game tracks. Of the beaten track only a compass can save one.

For over ten years the plains on the eastern and southern shores of Lake Edward have been closed and deserted by reason of sleeping sickness and the tsetse fly.

In the plains are the little pools of Kikural, unmarked on any map, with its islands of floating papyrus.—Detroit News.

Spelling Lesson

Once upon a time there was a stubborn student who refused to learn to spell.

But always the teacher pleaded with the student and often said: "You will suffer some great inconvenience, if not actual tragedy, some time, by reason of this refusal of yours to study orthography."

Yet still the student was obdurate, and said "Bah."

One day, after the obdurate student had grown to manhood, he poisoned himself eating oysters in "August."

And when the teacher, who had now grown old and toothless, saw him or thography, heard this, she said: "Oh, huh! I told him so."

Guinea Pigs for Table

Guinea pigs used as food are baked whole, or may be cut into pieces and fried or broiled. Cavies are excellent as entrees, in various stews and served with mushrooms, with brown onions, peas a la sautee, and especially with curry. On account of the whiteness of its skin the smooth-haired white guinea pig is best adapted for the table. The males become somewhat strong flavored with age, but are fine when four or five months old. Females are tender and finely flavored for a much longer period of time. They are probably at their best when about one year old.

Rhymes on Rings

While some old customs are dying out, others are being revived. Among the latter is that of engraving mottoes and proverbs on lovers' rings. Rings thus engraved were formerly called "posy rings," and some of the inscriptions were very quaint.

For instance, how would the following appeal to the "modernists": "My love is fire, I will not range. Like my love, my choice too well to change. Among the many other mottoes which adorned the rings of oldtime lovers were:

"In thee, my choice, I do rejoice."
"This and the giver are thine forever."
"Of all the rest I love thee best."
"God for me appointed thee."
"I joy in thee, joy thou in me," and "Providence divine hath made thee mine."

Those Fool Questions

The bright red motorcar skidded violently across the road, shot through a hedge and landed on its side in a roughly plowed field. The driver crawled painfully out of the wreck and stood looking at it, the picture of gloom.

After a while, a passer-by looked through a hole in the hedge.

"Hello," he exclaimed cheerfully. "Had an accident?"
The motorist bit back the angry words that rose to his lips.
"Oh, no," he replied, "not at all. The fact is I've just got a new car, so I brought the old one out to bury it. Have you a pick or spade you could lend me? I don't seem to make much headway digging by machinery."

Habits of Silence Inbred

In the old days Ojibway children were taught to be seen and not heard for to be heard might have meant death. When the scream of the hoot owl or other strange noises came from the woods, they snuggled closer, but kept all the quieter, for the noise which they heard was liable to be the signal of a prowling enemy, and to have cried would have been to have revealed the hiding place of the family or tribe.

Thus through the thousands of years that the Indians lived in constant danger of attack, the habit of silence was bred in the blood. Even now the Ojibway youngster will take a severe jolt without a sound, and even come up smiling.

Theatrical "Run"

"Your show is the worst we have ever had here," said the manager of a theater in a western town as he handed the manager of the touring company his share of the box-office receipts.

"That's strange!" said the manager of the company. "Why, when we played in Omaha we had the longest run in the history of the city!"
"I'm sorry!" replied the manager of the theater.
"Sorry about what?"
"Sorry the audience abandoned the stage!"

High Aim in Teaching Kindness to Animals

Several years ago, writes M. L. H. of the Humane Education Press bureau, Boston, the well-known American journalist and poet, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, wrote:

"Many times I am asked why the suffering of animals seems to call forth more sympathy from me than the suffering of human beings; why I give more time and effort in this direction of charitable work than toward any other.

"My answer is because I believe this work includes all the educational lines of reform which are needed to make a perfect circle of peace and good will about the earth.

"A majority of the people who hear about the societies for prevention of cruelty to animals imagine the work of those societies consists in arresting and punishing cruel drivers and in furnishing homes for vagrant animals. But these are only side issues of the main work. The real work is the education of the growing generation in kindness to all weaker and lesser creatures of earth.

"Thoughts are things. Thought is energy—thought is creative power. That is why it is important to direct the minds of human beings to good, kind, helpful thoughts."

It is, therefore, the aim and object of the humane education organizations in this country to instill in the minds of the boys and girls in the schools today the principles of justice, kindness and mercy to all living creatures.

Finest Chinese Teas Regarded as Dessert

Of course, Chinese do not eat ice cream for the whole cult of cold foods and cold drinks is contrary to their dietetic principles. Many centuries ago when China was swept by cholera, one of the sages recommended that the water be boiled, and in order to make the heated fluid more palatable a herb was steeped in it, now known as tea. Hence the development of tea culture throughout the Far-western world and the ceremonial significance of tea drinking. John W. Harrington writes in the New York Herald Tribune. In the cheap suey restaurant ordinary tea is served in pots, just as though it were water, but the superior teas are in reality dessert drinks, just as a port wine or a champagne was once considered in the days of the three-bottle men. When one is offered after dinner a small cup in which is such tea as "Mist on the Mountain," costing many dollars the pound, one knows that something most complimentary and luxurious is intended.

London Inn Fastidious

Although the old Inverness cloak that flourished as a gentleman's covering in Victorian days has disappeared almost entirely and is seen only rarely on elderly clubmen still clinging to a forgotten past, a modification in the form of an opera cloak or cape, cut very full is being shown by smart West end tailors as the latest thing for wear with evening dress. The dinner jacket became popular after the war for evening affairs, and for a time it seemed that the tail coat would be relegated to the past. Recently, however, there has been a revulsion of opinion, and a number of smart hotels that formerly permitted the entrance of diners in the more unconventional attire, now insist upon the tail coat and white tie.—New York World.

Heat and Lightning

One of the stereotyped statements of the textbooks is that lightning is made visible by the "heating of the air," just as the filament of an incandescent lamp is made to glow when an electric current passes through it. As no physicist, says Nature Magazine, has ever succeeded in making air luminous by any ordinary heating process, this explanation will hardly pass muster. The real explanation, according to Dr. W. J. Humphreys, must probably be sought in electrical phenomena within the atoms of the atmospheric gases rather than in the molecular movements that constitute heat.

Rain Needed Washing

One afternoon when Richard Mansfield was conducting a dress rehearsal, he and his entire company began coughing violently from a shower of dust which suddenly filled the wings.
"Where does all this abominable dust come from?" the actor demanded.
One of the stage hands, more courageous than his associates, ventured the explanation. "I think it comes from the rain-box, sir."
"And can't you wash the rain?" inquired Mansfield in all seriousness.—Boston Transcript.

His Idea

"Why is it, do you s'pose," musingly asked Mrs. Fumblegate in the midst of her perusal of the weekly paper, "that most always when you read about a woman being up in court the account tells how she was dressed, but when it is a man not a word is said about his clothes?"
"Well, I reckon," replied Farmer Fumblegate, "that mostly by the time he's been pulled to pieces by the lawyers he ain't got—that is, his clothes ain't worth describing."—Kansas City Star.

Moving Done By

George M. Clancy Vans

George M. Clancy Carting Company of 287 Webster Avenue, one of Rochester's best known moving and trucking firms reports a business ever on the increase these days, and the fleet of six mammoth trucks operated by the concern on the go at all times from morning until night. Few idle hours for those colossal behemoths of the highway are reported.

The company recently added a new piano moving department and since its installation it has been busy at all times, under the direction of Sam Myers. Mr. Myers does nothing but piano moving, and the truck used for that purpose is never used on another job. For piano moving is a branch of the business separate in itself and the equipment of that department is kept separate at all times.

Efficiency In Installation of Sterlings

No matter how good a furnace may be, how scientifically it may be built to get a dollar's worth of heat for every dollar's worth of coal burned, how scientifically it may be built to provide an even, sufficient heat in every room in the house despite the intensity of the cold outside—that furnace will not function properly and will not do what it is built to do unless it is efficiently installed.

With that thought in mind, the Installation Department of the Sterling Range and Furnace Company, located at 279 Plymouth Avenue South, was formed to install Sterling furnaces in Rochester. The firm is a factory department, its workmen are all factory trained and know the Sterling furnace from top to bottom, and more important than all, are furnace experts in that they know how to install the Sterling furnace properly, so that it will do all its makers claim for it and give lasting satisfaction to every owner of a better home where a Sterling is installed.

The Sterling furnace, Rochester built and installed in thousands of homes in this "city of better homes" the result of seventy years of study in home heating, is one of the most efficient and most easy and economical of operation home heating systems on the market. It saves fuel and labor, requires but little attention, and gives a maximum of heat for that slight attention.

All the work is done by experts in a most careful manner.
