That Earth Is Round Has Long Been Known

Discovery at Oxford of a musty tome written a couple of centuries before Columbus' time, in which it is definitely stated that the "urthe is round," will not surprise any person conversant with the subject. The assumption that the science of the Dark ages was sterile and entirely incorrect has always been gratuitous.

Knowledge, it is true, was not widespread among the masses. Scientists were inclined to keep their discoveries more or less secret for several reasons. But it is certain that an exchange went on among the elect and it is presumable that Columbus had access to documents, information and maps which have since been lost.

Unscientific and uneducated persons, such as kings and queens and emperors, naturally would not have understood scientific proof any more than, say, the average politician today understands the proof of the Einstein "theory." The theory that the earth is round must have had quite a wide circulation long before Columbus set out to put it to practical use.—New York Evening Post.

Folly to Lose Heart in Sight of Success

One of the worst evils wrought by the sin of discouragement is that we are tempted to stop when we are just on the eve of realized success, and almost in sight of the richest blessings. Up near the summit of Mount Washington, I once saw a cairn of stones to mark the spot where a poor old man had perished from exposure and heart failure on a cold night. Her father and she had rashly attempted to ascend the mountain without a guide (it was many years ago), and they had become lost, and had sat down beneath the chilling darkness of the summit night came on. The next morning the distracted father discovered that a very short distance would have brought him in sight of the lights from the windows of the "tip-top" cabin. Here is a bit of a parable to illustrate how those who are doing not rash things but things may be tempted to lose heart in the sight of success.—Catholic.

Youth Evidently Had Read and Remembered

The following anecdote, which is told about the English poet and essayist, Matthew Arnold, and his youthful son shows that the mental quickness that manifested itself first in old Thomas Arnold, the headmaster of Rugby, and then in Matthew, the son, was transmitted unimpaired to the third generation.

Matthew Arnold's son once heard someone say that the moon was made of green cheese. Immediately he said: "I don't believe the moon is made of green cheese." When his father asked why he did not believe so, the boy could only repeat: "I don't know why, but I don't believe it."

Matthew Arnold told him he should not give opinions without having reasons for them. Young Arnold was chagrined and went away squelched for the time being.

The next morning after greeting his father, he said: "Now I know why the moon is not made of green cheese. I found my reason in Genesis."

"You have the advantage of me, then," conceded his father. "I didn't know the subject was mentioned in the Bible."

"Yes, it is," replied the boy. "It tells about the creation, and the moon was made before there were any cows!"—Youth's Companion.

Franklin's Idea Retained

Of course you've heard the story about Benjamin Franklin munching a loaf of bread on the streets of Philadelphia, but do you know that that immortal character started a munching custom at the Pennsylvania hospital that has continued down to the present day and promises to last as long as the institution? In the early days of its existence the hospital had quite a struggle to get along. Franklin, always interested in its welfare, happened in one day and was told, among other things, that the young doctors were getting scarcely enough to eat. Touched by the tale, Franklin immediately visited a store and brought back a huge bag of ginger cookies. From that day to this a supply of ginger cookies has been on hand for the internes to munch between meals. They are kept in tin boxes, readily accessible to internes on night duty or others who are just naturally hungry most of the time.—Philadelphia Record.

WHY Macedonians Are Haunted by Fear

There are many other lovely mountain districts in Europe, and in some respects Macedonia recalls the scenery of the Scottish highlands. But there is nowhere else in Europe where you are conscious of the same strange brooding human spirit.

It is partly fear and partly poverty. But there is also an element of menace and savagery never far behind. You see it in the eyes of the passers-by, of the little village groups. You hear grim stories of banditry, now ominously reviving after a pause of half a century.

That is, I suppose, why the Greek government insisted that we should enjoy the company of ten gendarmes, cheerful men, but generally so far in the rear that we had to rely upon their spiritual support alone, says Harold Spencer in the London Telegraph.

Fear—that is at the base of this spirit that pervades Macedonia—the inherited fear of a population that has been harassed and ravaged for centuries, and expects to be harried and ravaged again. That fear has become defensive, and it is expressed in the behavior of the sheepdogs—animals that come from afar across the fields rushing swiftly at your motor and almost leaping into the car with deep bayings, only giving up the pursuit when they are quite exhausted. Those dogs remind one of the wolves of Russia.

This Macedonian fear becomes an alarmed curiosity as the people watch your car. What are you there for? What honest purpose could bring a man possessed of his senses to this forbidding land? What kind of oppressor are you? A landlord, a taxer, or an evictor? Do you come to sell weapons? To kidnap men?

Those are the fleeting shapes and forms taken by the fear of Macedonia. Remember that it is only twelve years since these people were subject to the caprices of any passing Turkish pasha or bey, and that since then, they have been banded about between the ambitions of new Christian states. Even today they are being visited by murderous bands. No wonder there is fear in Macedonia.

Why Gold Is Getting Scarcer Every Year

The world's annual output of gold is enormous and is greater at the present time than it was 20 or 30 years ago. Even so, there is not enough to go around as the basis of sound money or exchange. The reason for this is the large quantity of the precious metal used in arts and crafts and hoarded or lost.

Jewelers are the heaviest consumers. Every year they work up nearly 150 tons of gold, scarcely an ounce of which is ever recovered for other use. Goldleaf also absorbs huge amounts, vast quantities being used for plating other metals and for ornamenting pottery.

But it is in China and India that gold is most largely withdrawn from financial use. A form of plety in India is to regild the dome of some religious building. Such an operation often absorbs $50,000 worth of gold. Not long ago an India rajah used 17,000 English sovereigns to form centers to each minute pane in the windows of his palace.

Between £2,000,000 and £3,000,000 sterling in gold vanish yearly in India, and quite as much in China. This is all buried, and as a rule the owners die without revealing the secret of his hiding place; consequently the gold is lost, sometimes forever.

Famous English Library

The Bodleian library is the public library of the University of Oxford, England. Its name derives from Sir Thomas Bodley, who restored it in 1598. Among other things he gave to the library a large and valuable collection of books purchased on the continent. The library occupies the site of the old University library, which was despoiled of its contents during the reign of Edward VI. By copyright law, a copy of every volume given the library, which has from time to time been enriched by valuable collections of books and manuscripts. In the matter of rare books and manuscripts it is second only to the library of the Vatican, at Rome.—Kansas City Times.

Dental Hygiene

Among the occupations which have arisen in connection with the development of preventive medicine and public health work, that of the dental hygienist, oral hygienist, or dental nurse, as it has been variously called, is perhaps the most recent. Dental disease is the most common of all human ailments, and seems likely to remain so for some time to come. The public school offers an especially fine field of work for both prophylactic and educational work, and the dental hygienist is employed by the Department of Education in a considerable number of cities, towns and rural districts. Dental hygienists are well paid, considering the time spent in training. The salaries range from $80 to $200 a month.

Patient Hand Worker Replaced by Machine

In centuries past all ornamental iron work was wrought by hand with no better tools than a forge, a hammer, an anvil and a cold chisel.

The worker in iron was a true artist. He probably spent days in working several bars into a small candelabra. When it came to making up a large ornamental gate—why, that was labor for months. Now, however, conditions are greatly changed. We moderns are worshipers of a fetish—production. Machines grind out our ornaments as well as almost everything else that touches our lives.

There have been reversals, however, and we at least admire the handsome wrought work of the past. In fact, there are still among us men who can duplicate it, but they are few and their time is extremely valuable. Most of us do not care to spend a thousand dollars for a hand-wrought candelabra or bridge lamp and yet we desire these in period design.

Fortunately, we are not required to forego possession of such objects. An oxy-acetylene welding and cutting outfit in the hands, not of a natural born artist, or of a highly trained craftsman, but rather just a practical operator, will greatly cut the time and cost of producing the most intricate of ornamental iron products. All the welder needs is a photograph or sketch to work from.

Andrews Market Will Meet Your Thanksgiving Needs.

Do you realize that Thanksgiving is almost here? Thanksgiving, with its dinners, and all the folks coming for the day, and preparations begun several days ahead of time to meet the onslaught that is to be expected. Thanksgiving is always a busy time for the meat markets, and the Andrews Market at 73 Front St., are preparing for the busiest time in several seasons.

If you want a good choice it will be best for you to order early, for the late comers will find little left in the meat line.

At the Andrews market there will be home-grown turkeys, duck, geese and chickens, plump and meaty, to make a toothsome meal when surrounded by all the other good things which go to make up a Thanksgiving dinner. Some people, though, prefer a big juicy ham, full of cloves and rubbed with brown sugar, for this important meal. At the market you will find just what you want.

There will be no need of the household, which a meat market can supply, which will not be found at Andrews Market. The important thing will be to have your order in as early as possible.

Have You Moving Problems This Fall?

Many people move in the fall of the year, and sometimes when the change of location involves removal to another city, it is difficult to find adequate and safe transportation. Especially when the road conditions are poor, some hesitate to have their furnishings entrusted to the care of moving men. This problem of moving must be solved right at the outset, or the results will be unsatisfactory.

Be sure, if you are to have goods of any kind moved out of town, to seek a reliable and capable firm to do your moving, one that employs experienced drivers and handlers of household furnishings. Another feature is to see to it that your furniture is transported in clean, safe trucks that assure safety to the goods in transit.

The George M. Clancy Carting Company of 287 Webster Avenue, opposite Hazelwood Terrace, phone Stone 719, has a fleet of motor moving vans that afford ample protection to furnishings. Their men know their job and pack and unload with the utmost care and efficiency.

A moving concern sells service, and unless it be of the highest order the public will soon learn to let another company do the job. But the public has learned that this concern is reliable, efficient and reasonable in rates. A telephone call will bring one of their trucks to your door at any time.

Waterfalls and Rivers

The greatest and grandest waterfall in the world is the Victoria falls. Rhodesia, the second being Niagara, partly in Canada and partly in the United States. These, however, are far exceeded in height by mountain cataraacts in Europe and America, the highest being the Yosemite, in California. In Europe the highest are in Norway and the Alps. The water power of some of these is of great commercial value. Some authorities claim that the Mississippi is the longest river in the world, but part of the Missouri river has to be taken in to make the claim correct. Whitaker's Almanack gives the names of the six longest rivers as follows: Amazon, 4,000 miles; Nile, 3,600; Yangtze, 3,400; Yenisei, 3,300; Mississippi, 3,100; Missouri, 2,800.

Louvain University Begins 500th Year With Solemn Mass
By Rev. J. Van der Heyden, (Louvain Correspondent, N. C. W. C. News Service).
Louvain, Nov. 9.—The five hundredth year of the existence of the University of Louvain was inaugurated with the Solemn High Mass of the Holy Ghost, and the other elaborate ceremonies which always mark the opening of the scholastic year. The opening of Louvain is one of the great annual events in Belgium. This year in the rector's address some of the innovations announced are: the establishment of courses of lectures on Greek Orthodox Theology in line with the Pope's interest in the reunion of the Christian Churches and lecture courses on art, history, and political economy for medical students, as a means of developing their general culture. It was also announced that due to the generous response by the Belgian people, the buildings which will house the Cancer Institute established in connection with the Medical Department of the University, are now under construction. The radium pavilion which is to be placed in charge of Professor Maisin, is near completion.
