Bells of Cardinal's Native Village Sing Of French Glories

Paris, May 7.—Cardinal Binet, Archbishop of Besancon, has just made a visit to Juvigny, his native village, to bless the reconstructed church and the three new church bells whose inscriptions reflect the history of France. Thousands of the American soldiers fought and many died in and near the village during the World War.

The inscription on the first bell tells that its Godfather is Cardinal Binet, and its Godmother Madame de Ligneris. It bears the names of the curate, the mayor, and other municipal officials and ends with this statement: "I sing the glories of Juvigny, both religious and civil, since the times of Clovis, St. Remy, St. Vaast and St. Clothilde."

The second bell bears the names of its Godparents and the fact that it was blessed by Cardinal Binet. Its inscription reads: "I weep for the dead, our great dead, who died for their country. (The names follow). I chant their heroism and echo the lesson of their death."

The third bell sings of the future of Juvigny—its devotion to the faith of its fathers, Christian brotherhood, the tilth of the soil and the rearing of its children in the love of God, parents and native land.

This little town, in the neighborhood of France from the time of Clovis to that of Foch.

Card. Piffi Warns Austrians Against Moral Decadence

(By N. C. W. C. News Service) Vienna, May 7.—Following the Federal Council's adoption of an amendment condemning the propagation of immoral literature and Chancellor Seipel's stirring appeal to the faithful Piffi, Archbishop of Vienna, has addressed the congress of the Catholic People's Union of Austria on the subject of moral decadence in Vienna and throughout the country.

The Cardinal reviews the fight that Austria has made during the past ten years against economic misery, but declared that more frightful than financial distress is the moral depravity of her people. After passing through the frightfulness of war, he says, instead of emerging to a brighter and loftier life, a moral resurrection, the thought uppermost in the minds of the people was the obtaining of a life of ease, mirth and sensual satisfaction. Cardinal Piffi condemned the modern theatre and education without religion. He said that in considering the financial plight of Austria during these years since the war, the "doctors" have completely lost sight of her moral malady. He predicted that unless matters were remedied, affairs in Austria would eventually be on a par with those of Mexico.

"If Austria is to be saved," he concluded, "it can only be through the moral resurrection of her people. But that is impossible so long as her people are submerged in carnal affairs, having thrown overboard all faith in God, all sentiment of duty, and look upon work as something to be taken up with curses, hatred while engaged in it, and to be thrown aside at the earliest moment. The side of the hour is religious awakening as a people and as individuals and youth, above all, must be made to realize this necessity."

Calles Persecution Protested In Malta

Valletta, Malta, May 7.—In a resolution presented to the Maltese Senate by Mgr. Paul Galea, and unanimously adopted, protest was made against the persecution of Catholics in Mexico.

The resolution follows:
"This Chamber has witnessed with profound grief from the very beginning, the persecution, unrelentingly prolonged for too long a time, which the clergy and Catholics of Mexico have undergone with no hope of a change of conduct on the part of their persecutors. In the name of the Catholic religion and of humanity, we protest strenuously against this heinous, unworthy of our century, which boasts of its perfect civilization, and we solemnly hope that the Church of Jesus Christ will require without delay that Republic the liberty of which she has been so long deprived, and which, by the laws of God and man, is her due."
