Nun Attends Jubilee Of Utah Academy She Helped Found In 1878

Cobh Admiralty House Will Become Convent

(By N. C. W. C. News Service)
Dublin, June 25.—The ruins of Admiralty House, Cobh (Queenstown) have been purchased for the Order of the Sisters of Mercy.
Consisting of splendid stone walls, the ruins will be rebuilt and used as a novitiate. They are situated in the best part of the town, near a waterside. The contract for rebuilding has been placed, and will start at once.
Admiralty House was burned in the Sinn Fein struggle of 1917-1921.

(By N. C. W. C. News Service)
Ogden, Utah, June 27.—The golden jubilee of Sacred Heart Academy, established here in 1878, was celebrated last week, with Sister M. Flavia, one of the original little band of Holy Cross nuns who 50 years ago arrived in Ogden from the Motherhouse in Indiana, present. Sister Flavia has remained continuously at the Academy for half a century. She has seen it develop from small beginnings to a position of power for good in the community.
The celebration lasted three days, and included a Solemn Requiem Mass for the repose of the soul of a novice. They are situated in the superior of the academy, who died a year ago. It closed with a Solemn Pontifical Mass sung by the Rt. Rev. John J. Mitty, Bishop of Salt Lake City, and commencement exercises. Devotion shifted it into second place.

Douai Abbey, 300 Years Old, Starts Great New Church

London, June 25.—At the anniversary of the very hour and day on which the Benedictine monks of Douai reached London 25 years ago, after their expulsion from France, Bishop Cotter of Portsmouth, assisted by three abbots, yesterday laid the foundation stone of a magnificent church at Douai Abbey, Woolhampton, Berkshire.

An annual incident marked the ceremony. As the stone was being lowered into position, the bishop hesitated for a moment. He then turned and signalled to Abbot Kelly of Douai, who was standing behind him with Abbot Hurley and Abbot Taylor.

"You must have a hand in this," he said.

The abbots came forward, and the four prelates placed their hands on the stone as it was lowered.

The bishop's action was a tribute to the work of the three abbots in building up the Woolhampton foundation.

The completed church will be nearly 300 feet long and will have 20 chapels. The site has a commanding view of the Berkshire Downs, and the church will be one of the most prominent landmarks in the country.

Douai Abbey has an unbroken history of more than three centuries. It began with the Monastery of St. Edmund established in Paris in 1616, and has had an entirely British community throughout. During the French Revolution the monastic buildings were seized and used as a prison. Dispossessed, the monks became wanderers until they were able to settle at Douai in France in 1818. Here their monastic school educated during the remainder of the century some 600 priests for the English missions.

Twenty-nine years ago, Pope Leo XIII constituted the monastery as an abbey, but four years later the monks were expelled by the French Government, with the other religious communities. In England, however, they have met with remarkable success, and in addition to their work at the abbey and school, they have charge of 33 parishes in various parts of the country.

Priest With Aviation Hobby Devises A Fan Out of Model Plane

(By N. C. W. C. News Service)
Roslere, Wis., June 25.—Those familiar with the habits and hopes of the Rev. C. J. Smith, pastor of St. Hubert's church here, are not in the least afraid that the march of progress will ever distance the highly-esteemed priest, for his greatest pleasure comes from keeping pace with it.

Scattered in every direction around his study are aviation magazines and radio parts, and when not reading the one or tinkering with the other, the mechanically bent pastor is molding concrete objects or building in pretentious birdhouses, for none in reading, and the priest talks familiarly of modern airplanes.

A model airplane circles the ceiling of his work shop, tethered by a cord.

"That," says Father Smiths, "is my own idea for circulating air. I re-wound the armature from an old automobile horn and made a motor which operates of the house current. So, you see, I have an airplane and electric fan in one."

The magazines and show signs of much reading, and the priest talks familiarly of modern airplanes.

"I should like to fly," he admits. "I think that I could fly a ship if I had one. I would build a glider, but I do not know enough about the details of construction, and I should not like to fall with it."

Father Smiths then leads the way out into the yard to show one of his large bird houses mounted on a pole, with a circular shield below it to keep marauding cats from raiding the nests.

Many of the priest's parishioners have radios that he built. Radio, in fact, was his chief hobby before aviation showed it into second place.

E. J. Kelly, Noted Chicago Engineer, Wins a New Honor

(By N. C. W. C. News Service)
Chicago, June 25.—Edward J. Kelly, President of the South Park Commission and Chief Engineer of the Sanitary District of Chicago, recently awarded the degree Doctor of Laws by Notre Dame University in recognition of "public-spirited activities as well as engineering accomplishments," also has been awarded the distinguished service medal of the Comopolitan Club in Chicago for "his most constructive work in Chicago's most important park in 1927" as the man who has contributed most to the city's greatness in the last year.

The South Park Commission, under Mr. Kelly's presidency, is constructing the $75,000,000 lake front development which includes the island upon which Chicago's 1923 World's Fair will be held. These will extend from Grant Park to Jackson Park—a distance of seven miles. The site is now twenty-two feet under water in Lake Michigan. As Chief Engineer of the Sanitary District of Chicago, Mr. Kelly has general supervision of the $120,000,000 sewage disposal system, which has practically eliminated typhoid fever from Chicago.

Mr. Kelly is a Knight of Columbus and a practical Catholic.

London "Bobby" To Become Priest

London, June 25.—The policeman-ex-soldier, the Rev. Harold J. Colman is to be ordained a priest at Westminster Cathedral on June 26, by Cardinal Bourne. Some hundred Catholic priests—including his brother, who is in the same year—are expected to be present, the Catholic World says, of which the young priest was a former member, having turned his back on both things during his first engagement.

The Rev. Mr. Colman joined the army in 1911, during the world war, and was discharged in 1919, when he was then assigned to duty where he saw service. Later he went to Palestine, where he was wounded in both thighs during his first engagement. For his bravery in the light he was awarded the British Military Medal and a Romanian decoration.

After the war he joined the London Police Force, and spent two years in it, during that time he was several times mentioned in Police Orders for good work.

His brother in the force says it will be a bad day for any church that had down to be surrendered or the structure father Colman's name. "My $120,000,000 sewage disposal system had down to know his brother's name. He was always a good policeman and he was always the toughest customer with any sort of thing," he said.
