MISSIONARY FALLS VICTIM OF SELF-SACRIFICE

After 25 years' missionary service in West Africa, Fr. Joffroy, C.S.S., has contracted, from a native to whom he was administering, an infection which has necessitated several operations and finally his return to Europe. Father Joffroy is noted for his constant sacrifice of self in caring for the sick. During a recent epidemic, he asked permission of his Bishop to devote himself to the care of those stricken with the disease and he worked among them until his exhaustion. His contraction of an infection is but the climax of a quarter of a century of such self-sacrifice.

Goat Converts Buddhist To Catholicity

Dacca, Bengal, India.—Peculiar incidents and motives have been the Church, but extremely unusual is the experience reported by Fr. Mascarenhas, C. S. C., who claims that his latest convert was brought into the Church by a goat.

A Buddhist living in a village near Dacca had for a long time been questioning and cross-questioning his Catholic neighbors on their belief and practices, and though he had in this way become a Catholic.

Recently a son was born to one of the Catholic families and as the mother could not nurse the baby, a supply of good milk was needed to save the child's life. The scarcity of goats in the section seemed to point to tragedy. This made the father appeal to the missionaries for assistance in securing the loan of a goat.

His statement to his wife explains his frame of mind: "I am a Catholic from now on and I want my children to follow me. You, of course, are old enough to decide for yourself." He then related the story of the priest's charity and continued: "Do you think that any of your Buddhist monks will sacrifice not the price of a goat, but even a single rupee to help any of you in need? But look at the priest. He must beg for every cent he spends and yet he always stretches forth a helping hand to the needy. That's what I call religion, when a man is ready to sacrifice everything, even his life, for the good of the people under his care." — (Fides Service.)

Hospital Patient Carried in Wheelbarrow

Marlborough, South Africa.—"Many and various are the ways used for bringing patients to the hospital and dispensary in the primitively equipped mission fields," writes a South African doctor. "Recently one 'out-patient,' a young boy with a large abscess of the leg, was brought in a wheelbarrow each day to the dispensary for dressing. Part of the journey was uphill and two of his young friends were 'harnessed' with a rope to the front of the wheelbarrow while a larger lad pushed from behind."
