'Twas Ever Thus

Rich. Old Batch
I have everything but love,
And this to you I'll say.
It will all be yours,
When bells ring our wedding day.

You'll pale the ruby's splendor,
With diamonds the stars
outshining.

I crave your heart and hand,
Only say you'll be mine.

The Maiden's Answer.

Snow does not blush the rose,
Nor the weak heart pulsate,
Youth's lingering burning kiss,
Turning friendship into hate.

You can't fold the fond embrace,
Or flash the love-lit eye.

Gone are the youthful charms,
That money ne'er can buy.
Note:—This doesn't need any.

Mothers to whom I have recommended it report that their children gain weight and are stronger than ever before. It restored my son to health when he was in poor physical condition after war service."
