The National Anthem Of New Papal State Seventy-Two Years Old

Pontifical March Was Played for the First Time in 1857 in the City of Bologna

Rome, April 3.—The newest state in the world has a national anthem that is twenty-two years old. It originated on June 9, 1857, while Pius IX was visiting Bologna. As the Pope entered the city, the band of the 47th Regiment of Austrian Infantry, known as "Count Kinsky's," played for the first time a march composed by their leader, Victor Hallmayr, and named "Pontifical March." The composition met with great favor and was played at other cities visited by the Sovereign Pontiff on his tour through Romagna and Tuscany. After his return to Rome, Hallmayr's march was often played by musicians of the papal court and, by special disposition, was declared the pontifical anthem, probably in 1858.

Papal Orders Maintained The pontifical state will not have to revise its decorations and orders of knighthood since, despite the eclipse of the temporal power of the papacy, the papal orders were maintained. They are six in number: The Supreme Order of Christ; the Order of the Golden Spur; the Order of Pius IX; the Order of St. Gregory-the-Great; the Order of St. Sylvester and the Order of the Holy Sepulchre. These orders are recognized by most states and can be registered in chancelleries, even in France.

The Supreme Order of Christ was instituted in 1319 by John XXII. It is the highest award and has only one class. This rarely awarded decoration is a red enamel Latin cross with a white cross in the center. The Golden Spur is traditionally attributed to the time of Constantine-the-Great. Suppressed for a while, it was re-established by Pius X in 1905. It embraces one class of a hundred knights. Pius IX founded the order bearing his name in 1847. It has three classes—the grand cross, commander and knight.

The Order of St. Gregory-the-Great, created by Gregory XVI in 1834, also has three classes. The only living person who has received the military title of the grand cross is the French General Weyrand. The Order of St. Sylvester was established by Gregory XVI in 1841 and re-established by Pius X in 1905. It too has three classes. The Order of the Holy Sepulchre dates from the time of the Crusades. It was restored by Pius IX and improved by Pius X. It comprises the grand cross, commander with plaque, or grand officer; commander without plaque; and chevalier. The Sovereign Pontiff is Grand-Master of the order, which is divided into national chapters. Besides these orders, the Holy See accords to pious persons for special service to the church or parish, the Beneficent medal and the Pro Ecclesia et Pontifice cross, the former instituted by Pius VII and the latter by Leo XIII.

The Papal Train The announcement that the Italian State would present the Holy Father with a special train similar to that of the prince hereditary has directed attention to the old papal train which may be seen in the Castle of San Angelo. It was built in Paris in 1858 and presented to Pius IX by Napoleon III so that he might take part in the inauguration of the first Italian railway line from Rome to Civita-Vecchia.

The train consisted of three luxurious coaches. One coach is open on three sides which permitted the populace to see the pontiff as he passed through cities and towns.

Laborer Pledged Tips To The Poor

Paris, April 4.—Father Lhande, S. J., popular speaker who delivered a quarter-of-an-hour talk over the radio each Sunday, always receives numerous letters from his unseen audience, but one received recently is particularly touching. A fortnight after he had delivered a talk on the extreme suffering occasioned by the severe winter and had appealed for relief for the poor, Father Lhande received the following letter from a mechanic: "You words made me think that although I do not belong in the category of the rich but am simply a laborer, I should have something to give to the poor. I promised myself that I would send you all the tips I received the following week. Extraordinary thing, my clients were more generous than usual and I amassed the sum of 153 francs, a thing that had never happened before in my entire life. One may see here the effect of Divine Compassion for the poor." Attached to the letter was a check for 153 francs.

During the second session, Dr. Belaunde will discuss diplomatic relations in Latin America, and will take up the Pan-American Congress held in Panama in 1926, and the evolution of the Monroe Doctrine. The second session will coincide with the university's Institute of Public Affairs.

The play tells the story of a Southern Cinderella who comes into her own in an unusual manner. The members of the cast will include Dorothy Tobin, Lois Enright, Frances Hassett, Esther Skehan, Frances O'Brien, Phyllis Senke, and Jane Tierney. Catherine Hoek is the business manager. Catholic College In Andes Installs Radio Telephone

Rio de Janeiro, April 4.—The College of Nossa Senhora de Assumpcao (Our Lady of the Assumption), situated in the far regions of the Amazon, almost on the boundary line of Peru, has installed a radio-telephonic station which will keep the district more closely in touch with the civilized world. The college is directed by the Missionary Tertiary Capuchins of the North of Brazil. The student body consists of a hundred or more native Amazonians. Besides the usual studies, the curriculum includes religious instruction, music and military gymnastics.

The location of the institution is the vicinity of the tiny town of Sao Paulo de Olivenca, seat of the Appellate Prefecture of Upper Amazon. The nearest town of any size is Manaus, more than 500 miles away, situated on the banks of the Rio Negro and capital of Amazonas, the largest Brazilian state embracing 750,000 square miles of practically impenetrable jungle. The only mode of travel or communication is via the Amazon and its tributaries.

Congress of Clergy Of Italy is Called

Rome, April 4.—The second National Sacerdotal Eucharistic Congress will be held here June 10-14. Not since September, 1913, has the Italian clergy assembled in Rome for this purpose. The recent signing of the Lateran treaty and the sacerdotal jubilee of His Holiness will add to the solemnity of the occasion. The congress will open in the church of St. John Latran with an address on "The Italian Priesthood at the Feet of the Pope," and will close with an audience with the Holy Father.

English Catholics Will Press Their School Grievance

London, March 24.—As soon as the government announced the date of the general parliamentary election—May 30—arrangements were made by the Catholic authorities here to secure Albert Hall, largest auditorium in the city, for a big meeting at which the Catholic school grievance will be stated just before the polling. Cardinal Bourne will preside at the gathering at which a capacity audience of 8,000 is assured. Catholics are asking that Catholic education should be assured them in their own schools without their having to pay, as at present, the full cost of building the schools, repairing them and buying the sites, as well as having to contribute their due share to the education rate. For several weeks meetings have been held all over the country, and particularly in the North, to place the facts before the electorate. All the parties are deeply concerned about the coming June election because 5,000,000 new voters will be cast by newly qualified women voters, and no one can tell how this large vote will be cast. With this inherent uncertainty present, no party wants to make its position more hazardous by antagonizing the large Catholic vote of the country. It is not expected that the Catholic vote will be cast solely on the school question, but as the present financial burden on the schools has become intolerable it is certain that the question will have considerable weight with the large majority of the Catholic electorate.
