School Problem China's Greatest, Bishop Declares

Kongmoon, South China, April 18.—The school problem is on the foreground of those confronting the Catholic Church in the New China, declares Bishop James E. Walsh, A. F. M., describing conditions in the Maryknoll Vicariate Apostolic of Kongmoon.

"Educational work," says Bishop Walsh, "while inescapably of first importance, labors here under certain disadvantages. One is expense. All government and most private schools gauge tuition far below expense, and mission schools must follow suit if they are to have any pupils. Then, Catholic teachers are almost non-existent. There is not one Catholic Normal School in the whole of South China. Finally, sanitary regulations applying to all schools are constantly being issued, many of a hampering nature.

"For these reasons, chiefly, the vicariate has so far been unable to launch an adequate school program and has had to content itself with a small number of elementary parochial and village schools. The only secondary school in the entire vicariate is the Sacred Heart School at Kweilin. This school corresponds to the Chinese scheme of education to the high school, though actually it is a lower standard.

EVERY SESSIONS WHEN FRANCE FAVORS RETURN OF MISSION SOCIETIES

and if experience proved it would be advisable to do so.

Each of these authorized Congregations will receive the property held in sequestration since the time of Combes.

The anti-clerical, communist, socialist and radical debates presented every possible objection in an attempt to check the passage of the project. These objections were numerous, but one is significant of the intolerance of these so-called "free thinkers." It was proposed that members of the missionary Congregations be prohibited by law from speaking in metropolitan territory. Premier Poincare pointed out that no republican government would dare promulgate such a check upon freedom of speech.

The amendment was repulsed by a vote of 320 to 250. Among those voting for the amendment were former Prime Minister Herriot and former Minister of Public Instruction Francois-Albert.

In the course of the debate, important declarations were made regarding the general situation of the Congregations in France.

Anti-Clericals Rebuffed

The anti-clericals contended that after authorizing the return of nine Congregations, the government would be forced to take measures against the numerous Congregations that have been reinstated without authorization. Premier Poincare, Minister of the Interior Tardieu, and Minister of Foreign Affairs Briand, in turn, declared that there was no reason for enforcing the law more vigorously than it has been heretofore.

Minister Briand insisted that a government does not have the right to awaken irritating discussions and endanger the public peace. Having pointed out that more than 500 Congregations were regularly authorized, he admitted that without doubt a great number of others were in an abnormal and illegal situation. But if such was the case, he asked, whose fault was it? The law of 1901, the law of Waldeck-Rousseau, provided that some authorizations would be accorded. This law did not receive its application because a great number of authorizations had been rejected en bloc. If order is to be restored and the law respected, he declared, it will be necessary to accord authorization to the Congregations demanding it.

Priest Is Buried In Pauper's Grave

San Francisco, April 18.—In compliance with his wishes, the Rev. John P. Tobin, late pastor of St. Cecilia's church of this city, was buried a few days ago in a pauper's grave.
Father Tobin was Catholic chaplain at the Laguna Honda Home, and spent much of his time as a priest in San Francisco in the service of the poor. Following a requiem Mass in the church of his flourishing parish, the funeral procession made its way to a grave among the humble and penitents of Holy Cross Cemetery, and there Father Tobin was buried.

Church Dedicated In New York City

New York, April 16.—Cardinal Hayes dedicated the new $250,000 building of St. Ann's Roman Catholic Church, at Bainbridge Avenue and Gun Hill Road, the Bronx, Sunday afternoon. About 1,000 persons were in the auditorium of the new building, and as many more were gathered outside.
The dedication sermon was delivered by the Right Rev. Thomas Carroll, Chancellor of the Arch-Diocese of New York. The Rev. Martin F. Cavanaugh, rector of the church, and the Rev. Michael J. Toner, the curate, also spoke.
The parish was organized about three years ago. Since then, services have been held in the auditorium of the Montefiore Hospital, across the street from the new church.
