George Stallings Widely Mourned
Famous Baseball Player Was Buried from Roman Catholic Church in Georgia.

Baseball fans all over the country, and especially in the city of Rochester, are mourning the death of a once-famous player and heroic leader of the national sport—George T. Stallings, for seven years owner and manager of Rochester's International League team. Mr. Stallings died at his plantation home near Raddock, Ga., on Monday, May 13, and was buried from St. Joseph's Catholic Church at Macon, Ga., on Wednesday, with the Rev. Father J. F. Clarkson, S. J., officiating. Interment was at Macon.

Mr. Stallings had suffered from heart disease for many months before his death. He was a colorful figure in baseball. He wrote his name among the immortalists of the game in 1914, when he took the management of the Boston Nationals, pulled them out of the cellar, led them in a triumphant march to head of the league, then won the world's championship by defeating "Connie" Mack's famous Philadelphia Athletics four straight games, establishing a new record in the championship race.

Frank Mura Rolls Into First Place

The Rochester Bowling Association annual tourney this week was featured on Monday evening by the fine work of Frank Mura of the St. Boniface team. Frank had three big totals—202, 276 and 225, a total of 703, which put him 25 notches ahead of Joe Summers, who had held the top with a total of 678. It was fine work, and won hearty commendation.

His last big hike in 1913, from New York to Minneapolis, a distance of 1,516 miles, to lay the cornerstone of the Minneapolis Athletic Club. He covered the distance in fifty-one days. Weston visited Rochester five times during his career, and many people here had talked with him and admired him.

Two years ago Weston was found penniless and hungry in a tiny East Side flat in New York. He had applied for a job as messenger to save himself from starvation. Publicity over his condition aroused public opinion, and help poured in upon him. Then came Anne Nichols, author of "Able's Irish Rose," and a convert to the Catholic faith. She set aside a fund of $30,000, the interest of which provided him with an income of $1,500 a year. The old legs failed him just an instant a few weeks later, and a taxicab hit him. He had been in a wheel chair most of the time since, and in bed since last November.

Class Day For the Aquinas Seniors

At a special Senior meeting on Tuesday the Class of '29 of Aquinas Institute began preparations for its annual class day, to be held soon. Senior President Herbert Metzger selected a committee of Robert O'Brien, Henry Zimmerman, Nelson Bellner and Eugene Maloney to supervise arrangements for the day. This announcement will no doubt stir the junior class into action, for it is a tradition that the third-year attempt to hamper the activities of the Seniors on this day. The fourth year men are also looking forward to the skirmish.

How Can a Pirate Be a Giant, Too?

How can a Pirate first baseman be a Giant, too? The Pirate ball from Pittsburgh, the Giants are the McGraw clan of New York city. Yet Pittsburgh has a Pirate that is a Giant, too. How?

The answer is easy—after you see Jim in operation, Earl Sheely, Pirate first baseman, went under the column rule of wondering newspapermen recently, and it was found that he could reach to a height of eight feet three inches with a foot on the bag, and he could stretch forward or sideways exactly seven feet three inches.

Naturally, the Pittsburgh players say he makes a grand target for their throws to first.

Grand Old Hiker Will Hike No More —Buried from St. Patrick's Church, Brooklyn

Edward Payson Weston, champion walker of the world for years, will walk no more. He was buried from St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church, Taaffe Place, Brooklyn, with a solemn high Mass of requiem Wednesday morning. Ninety years old, he died Sunday night at his home in Brooklyn, and all America suddenly remembered the grand old man who, when 70 years of age, walked from New York to San Francisco, a distance of 3,895 miles, in 104 days and seven hours. Experts said that would finish him, but the next year he walked back by a slightly shorter route, covering 3,600 miles in 75 days, 23 hours and 10 minutes.

There is an old Irish story about a man who walked from Dublin to Cork one evening. The Irish woman, commenting piously on the deed, expressed belief that it was his feet and his faith that got him through. It was the same with Weston. He had an elastic, swinging stride and legs that never seemed to tire. At the age of 22 he took his first long walk, 443 miles, from Boston to Washington, to attend the inauguration of Abraham Lincoln, covering the distance in 208 hours.

In 1867 he walked from Portland, Me. to Chicago, 1,326 miles, in twenty-six days. Forty years later he repeated the feat and covered a route ninety miles longer than the first and bettered his record by twenty-nine hours. He appeared in many exhibitions and contests in America and Europe. In 1879 he won the famous Astley Belt by covering 559 miles in 141 hours and 41 minutes in Agricultural Hall, London.

His last big hike in 1913, from New York to Minneapolis, a distance of 1,516 miles, to lay the cornerstone of the Minneapolis Athletic Club. He covered the distance in fifty-one days. Weston visited Rochester five times during his career, and many people here had talked with him and admired him.
