Agencies That Help Tourists— Plan Trips Through Europe

"If I had a ship like that, Monsieur, I would go round the world and see everything. It would be like a city floating on the sea. A man could travel and see the whole world, and be all the time at home."

William McKee, writer of the sea, expresses all the lure and romance of a 'Round the World Cruise as he recounts his luncheon conversation in Alexandria with a friend from Smyrna over Russian Caviar, with French bread and Greek music. Five great "Cities of the Sea" sail this winter. Come in and let us explain the particular advantages of each cruise, its itinerary and modest costs.

Variety Keynote of New Wardrobe

Broken Lines, Ways of Cutting, Combinations of Colors, Features.

Untrimmed Dress Is Passé.
Woman's simple untrimmed dress has passed. Now elaborate workmanship is essential.

All sorts of artistic designs are formed on suits, wraps and dresses by means of tucking. There are flowers, leaves, fans and seaweed, indeed almost any design of which the fancy of dressmakers conceive. Tuckings and appliques in joints and slanted effect are perhaps the outstanding.

Stitched cut-out sections on the skirts or suits may represent fun effects. These are pointed up or pointed down. A sunburst design may frame circular gorges on skirts or spring away from a plaited hem. Lightweight wool crepe frocks, which are so important in this season's wardrobe, have their straight bodices ornamented with stitched sections. Other wool gowns are entirely plaited at their skirt part, some under a hip yoke curved up on one side or pointed up in front. Others are covered at the waist and over the hips with horizontal stitched straps that hold the plaits in under a detached bodice. One dress has a skirt plaited in two sizes of box plaits. It is attached to a jumper top trimmed above the waist with a cut-out Greek key design.

Sequined cape coats for evening are lined with velvet and have rich colors. Other cape coats are covered with horizontal lines of artificial silk fringes, while some straight crepe capes with scarf collars have two gathered frills from the elbow line to the hem.

Plain chiffon gowns have elaborate insertions of tucking in geometrical patterns. Even in the early summer frocks for daytime wear in the country this idea is carried out.

A feature of special interest in many printed crepe gowns is that the flowers with which they are figured are cut out and assembled to form floral borders at the neck and sleeve openings, the hem and the cuffs.

Larger Hat, Lower Crown.

Hats for the season may be small or of medium size, but there is a decided tendency toward the larger hat with a lower crown. The older woman always is glad to have a hat that throws a becoming shadow on her face. In hat fabrics felts, satins, straws and ribbons are equally good. Straws of this year, however, are very much like fabrics. Most of them are as light and soft as thistle-down. Milliners in designing hats use them just as they would felts. The smartest hats for young women are very short in front to show the forehead. The carefully shaped eyebrow must be seen. Some of the most attractive ones are long either on the side or back. Turbans may have ruffles across the back, or if of straw may be trimmed with rows of straw curls. Models such as these are especially adapted for the woman who is permitting her hair to grow.

With street clothes the very simplest gloves always are in good taste. They may be of white or yellow chambray. Yellow gloves are very smart at the moment. For the morning gloves should be heavy and washable and of the gauntlet type. For afternoon wear nothing is better than white or beige kid or duckskin cut on the same lines.

With the ensemble or the three-piece suit, if it is not far trimmed, and very often it is not, we will wear a gay scarf, figured perhaps if the ensemble be of plain material, and in patchwork effect if it is not. The darning for scarf which has become almost a necessity of late years may be composed of one or two skins. The mode in which the perfectly dressed woman wears this scarf is most important. The fashion of wearing the single skin loosely over the shoulder and hanging down the back has departed. This season the scarf should be worn around the neck with both head and tail to the front.

Shoes vary from the tailored Oxford worn with the sports suit to the intricately strapped slipper with high heel, which so many women who carefully consider their toilette prefer for afternoon. Colored leathers, used either for the shoe itself or for the trimming, are much in evidence, so if you like colored shoes your foot-wear may match your ensemble. If you prefer beige tones of the natural leather, make your pumps may be trimmed with a color to harmonize with your costume.

Generous Praise To Motherhood By Our Bishop

Nazareth Grammar School Graduates Hear Timely Talk by The Rt. Rev. John Francis O'Hern, D.D.

Nazareth Grammar School graduated a large class of girls the other evening. The exercises were held in Nazareth Academy Auditorium, which was filled with relatives and friends of the girls. The address of the evening was given by the Rt. Rev. John Francis O'Hern, D.D., Bishop of Rochester. It was an edifying tribute to motherhood, in which he held up the mother as the heart of the home. Bishop O'Hern said in part:

"Of the worth and dignity of the true mother, I need not speak. For the person who needs to be told that nothing on earth approaches so near to the divine as does a mother's love, cannot be made to understand. This is so true that he who does not know and has not felt the sublime influence of a mother's love, has missed one of the most inspiring sentiments and noblest motives that can arouse and touch the human heart.

Loftiest Expression of Goodness

"I have said that the good mother is the loftiest expression of God's goodness in this world of ours, and that her supreme function in the family is that of the heart. It is the heart that suffers, yes, sometimes even breaks, as it is the heart that rejoices and overflows with happiness. While suffering and sympathy make the mother so cherished, so inspiring and so loved, it is through suffering and sympathy that she also rears her greatest joy. Indeed, it may be said in all truth that no human joy is comparable to that experienced by a good mother. Every joy of her children is hers twofold, for she realizes that in proportion as she loves and lives for her family, they love and live for her. In this manner she is queen of the household, retaining supreme over the hearts of her subject. But more than that she is an inspiration to the family, being the link to the souls of her children. She it is who opens their little hearts and sows in them the seed of all future noble character.

Doing Good For Others

"The very essence of goodness lies in imparting itself to others. And the best and happiest people in the world are they who find their pleasure in doing good for others. And so a good mother always gives to her children and their father the best present possible—herself, and this is a pleasure she enjoys daily. The unthinking person may speak of the drudgery of the faithful mother; but in very truth, the good mother fulfills her daily duties with joy and looks upon them as a little bit of heaven. As the years steal on, the affection for her by her children and their father grows stronger and stronger. Idolized by her family, she reigns queen of the household and her heaven has begun even before she says farewell to earth. "Mother, you have a wonderful mission to perform in the world; nor will you realize what that mission means to be a good mother until you see God face to face."
