Good Design for Those Who Want to Get Most Space for Their Money

We are sure you will agree that this is a fine example of the colonial design. Don't overlook the floor plan with its center hall and large sun room off the living room. The entrance is one of our best colonial designs.

By W. A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to practical home building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 187 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

There are many variations of the colonial type home, but the one shown in the accompanying illustration is about as near the true colonial as it is possible to get. The only variation from the colonial in this home is the addition of the sun porch at the right. Without this porch this home is exactly the type that will be found in so many New England villages.

This is a two-story, rectangular house, 28 feet by 21 feet. On the first floor are the living room, dining room and kitchen. In this house, there being two windows on either side of the entrance with three windows on the second floor in perfect alignment.

The living room at the right of the hall extends the depth of the house and is 23 feet by 11 feet 8 inches. Connected with this through french doors on both sides of an open fireplace is the sun parlor which is 7 feet 6 inches by 10 feet deep. To the left of the entrance hall is the dining room, the same width as the living room and 12 feet 6 inches deep. At the back is the kitchen, 9 feet 8 inches by 10 feet with a breakfast room adjoining.

Colonial stairs run out of the entrance hall to the second floor. There are three bedrooms, two at the front and one at the back and a bathroom, all opening off the hall.

The house is built of frame set on a concrete foundation with a basement of the dimensions as the house proper. An attractive feature of the home is the entry way which is enclosed. The platform and steps of brick lead to it.

For prospective home builders who want to get the greatest amount of space for their money, this design is good. At the same time there is no more attractive house than the colonial.
