Catholic Students Ousted From Public School, Re-Admitted

Pierre S. D. July 5.—The expulsion of Catholic students who refused to attend the reading of the Scriptures from the King James version of the Bible from the public schools of Meade County was rescinded and the students ordered readmitted to their classrooms in a decision of the State Supreme Court just handed down here. The decision reversed a ruling of the Meade County Court.

Court action was brought against the school board by the father of one of a dozen or more Catholic students, who, in February, 1928, refused to attend opening exercises at which the reading of the Bible or the recitation of the Lord's Prayer had been ordered. The students were expelled and it was announced they would not be allowed to attend classes until they apologized and agreed to comply with all school regulations.

The Supreme Court held the school board's action to be in violation of the constitutional right of religious freedom. The students were ordered re-admitted without apology.

through a double-ensued opening is the dining room which is a front corner room with five windows, making it a light and airy place for the family meals. Back of the dining room is the kitchen, 9 feet by 11 feet.

An open stairway leads out of one side of the living room to a central hall on the second floor. Off this hall opens three bedrooms, two at 14 feet, and the other 10 feet by 13 feet 6 inches. There is a small back bedroom which is 9 feet 3 inches square. The bathroom opens off the upstairs hall at the head of the stairs. One attractive feature of this home is the roof projection at the front over both the living and dining-room windows and the colonial type open porch with boxed pilars and a gable roof. The house is of frame construction and set on a concrete foundation with a single brick veneer wall below.
