CATHOLICS The Big Leaguers

BOB O'FARRELL

One of the best catchers in big league baseball is Bob O'Farrell of the New York Giants, formerly manager of the St. Louis Cardinals. Critics say the Giants have never had a catcher like him since Roger Bresnahan backstopped them. He is a likable fellow, as well as a great ball player.

K. of C. Frozen By Frigidaires In Sharp Contest

The K. of C. baseball nine and the Frigidaires clashed last Sunday afternoon at the Red Wing Stadium. The results almost convinced Manager John A. Doyle that he will have his friend, Capt. Jack McDonald bring over an Irish "keener" the next time Jack makes a trip to Ireland. Certainly it would take a professional crier to do justice to the results.

The game started off with a bang, the Knights making two runs in the first inning. The ice-box men stayed blank until the fourth, when they brought in three runs. Things moved happily until the sixth, when Joe Moohan, in the box for the Knights, blew up like a circus balloon. When the smoke and dust cleared away, the Frigidaires counted a total of 10 runs for the inning. The Knights were able to cop only two more, and the ice-boxers came back with a couple of new ones in the seventh. The mourning card showed 15 to 4 in the final. Russ Brown pitched for the Frigidaires, and the Knights got only seven hits off him.

Contracts to Be Let For Fine New Church For Mt. Carmel Parish

Buildings on New Site Are Being Removed, and Work on New Church Will Start Soon—George F. Lorenz Is the Architect

Contracts will be let within the next few weeks for a fine new church for the parish of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel. Work will be started on the church about September 1st, and it is planned to have the edifice completed by June 1st of next year.

The church will be erected on a site purchased three years ago, on Woodward Street, adjoining the present church. Three old buildings on this site are being removed now, and excavation for the basement of the church will be started as soon as these buildings have been razed. The new church will be a brick structure, and it will seat 800 people. It has been designed by George F. Lorenz, architect, 311 Alexander Street, and he has given a great deal of time and thought to the work.

The exterior will be of modern Romanesque architecture, with red brick and granite cut stone. It will have a frontage of 69 feet on Woodward Street, will be 122 feet deep, and will set back 32 feet from the sidewalk. On the west side a tower rising 80 feet in height will grace Rochester's skyline. A series of steps leading from the sidewalk to the main entrance will form the approach to the church.

The doors of the main entrance will open directly into the narthex, the sidewalks of which will be finished in a cren stone effect, with quarried tiled floor. Opening directly on the narthex will be the baptistry, the ushers' wardrobe and the stairs leading to the choir gallery. Behind the narthex, facing the nave of the church, will be located the confessionals.

A Beautiful Interior
 The church will have a beautiful interior. The body of the church will have a clear width of 65 feet, with a segmental vaulted ceiling laid out in a series of panels. On the side walls ornamental pilasters, designed in a modified Corinthian style, supporting a plaster cornice, will form the decorative effect. The entire floor of the nave will be of the windows throughout will be of various shades of amber Cathedral glass, with upper and lower ventilators in each window. On each side of the nave space will be reserved for shrines.

A Spacious Sanctuary
 The plans call for a large sanctuary, with five altars and entrances to the vestry. A cloister at the rear of the church will connect with the present church and school building.

The entire trim will be of fumed oak finish, harmonizing with the interior wall decorations. The church will be heated by the vacuum vapor system. Acoustical and insulating material has been incorporated in the design.

The roof construction will be of the Lancelotti type, providing an economical method of long span, unobstructed construction. It will be covered with a blended color of asbestos shingles.

Campaign Now in Progress
 The Rev. Walter A. Feery, rector of the Church of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel is very enthusiastic over the proposed new church. His parish has grown rapidly, so that more space is needed for his people, and much more room for his school children. There are approximately 700 children in his parish school.

To help finance the campaign, Father Feery has launched a church for building pledges. Eight teams of men are busy canvassing the parish for pledges, and they will continue this work until about September 1st. Father Feery will welcome donations from outside his parish. His work will deserve generous help from people who are glad of an opportunity to give needed assistance to parishes that are not too strong financially themselves. Bishop O'Hern has given his hearty approval to the building of the new church, and Father Feery will have the congratulations and good wishes of a host of friends in his undertaking.

St. Margaret Mary Alacoque, Saint of the First Fridays

Highly favored as Margaret Mary had been, still she needed the training necessary to form her into the subdued, recollected religious whose whole exterior spoke of humility and abnegation. Ardour, even to heroism, she possessed in a remarkable degree, but the spirit of her order, the Sisters of the Visitation, forbade impulsiveness and brought every emotion under the control of the firm, God-governed will. Once when Margaret Mary intended to exceed the limits of a penance that she had been allowed to impose on herself, the holy founder, St. Francis de Sales, appeared to her and said: "Remember that obedience and not austerities is the principal foundation of this congregation."

By Divine permission in order perhaps to place the grand revelations granted to her beyond the possibility of a doubt—Margaret Mary was led to an order in which any departure from the ordinary ways was looked on with suspicion and distrust. There would have been no hope of Margaret's being admitted to profession in Paris had not the senior religious found in her as they affirmed "a solid, clear, penetrating judgment, a good understanding and a constant readiness to submit her devotion and penances to the direction of her superiors". They tested this by appointing her assistant to a Sister who employed her at the work of her office, during the whole time of her prayer. "And on my going to my mistress to ask leave to make my prayer at another time," says Margaret Mary, "she told me that my prayer for the time being was to do the work of the novitiate."

Great Revelations
 In preparation for the great revelations that were later to be given to our Saint, the Divine Redeemer put to her the question: "Was she not willing to suffer all the pains which sinners deserve that He might be glorified?" "Upon this, I offered Him my soul and my whole being in sacrifice, expressing my delight to suffer all these pains to the day of judgment."

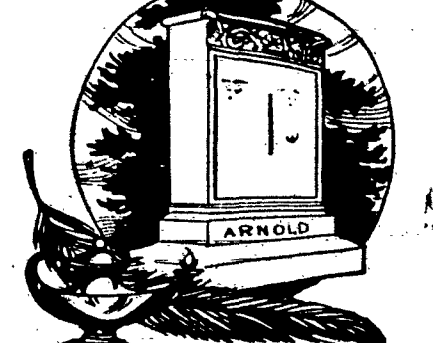

"It was the revival of charity that I longed for," said our Blessed Saviour, "charity which is wounded alike by worldliness and by those consecrated to me." "Tell your superior," said the Divine Master, "that she has nothing to fear in receiving you to profession. I will make you more useful to the order than can yet be known, and I henceforth adapt My graces to the spirit of your rule, the will of your superiors and your own weakness, so that you may look with suspicion on anything which draws you from the exact observance of the rule which I would have you prefer to all else. Moreover, I am content that your superiors do what they please with regard to your action."
