Rev. William P. Ryan Gave Eloquent Talk At K. C. Meeting

Nearly 200 members were present at the K. of C. Meeting on Monday evening this week. The meeting was featured by a splendid patriotic talk by the Rev. William P. Ryan of St. Bernard's Seminary. Father Ryan spoke of the meaning and importance of Armistice Day, and of the necessity of all citizens to so live and act that those who died for America shall not have died in vain. He was heard with great appreciation by the members.

The K. of C. Choral Society sang, and a new experiment was put into action—the donating of a five-dollar gold piece as an attendance prize. Fred J. Mix proved to be the lucky man, but Mr. Mix heroically declined to accept the prize on the ground that as an officer of the Council he was exempt. Mr. Mix is Council Advocate. The lucky box was again put into motion, and the name of Louis J. Knapp appeared on the horizon. But Louis didn't appear. For the first time in 23 years he was absent from a meeting, and it cost him $5 on the prize then went to Myron H. Jordan, 52 Pilen Street, a new member.

At every meeting of Rochester Council hereafter a $5.00 gold piece will be awarded as an attendance prize. It will be awarded only to members present at the meetings.

Cyrus H.K. Curtis Donates $10,000 To Hospital Fund

Philadelphia, Nov. 15.—The largest single contribution to the St. Joseph's Hospital campaign fund, $10,000, has just been made by Cyrus H. K. Curtis, nationally-known publisher and philanthropist of Philadelphia.

Within 24 hours of the time the appeal for funds was made, Mr. Curtis' check was received by the committee, Joseph L. Durkin, chairman announced. The hospital, for which the drive is being conducted is under the guidance of the Sisters of Charity.

Los Angeles Bishop Guest in Rochester After Long Trip

The Rt. Rev. John J. Cantwell, D.D., Bishop of Los Angeles, Cal., was the guest during the week of the Rt. Rev. John Francis O'Hern, D.D., Bishop of Rochester, and of Mrs. Margaret Bassett of Prince Street. Bishop Cantwell was on his way home from a three months' trip to Italy, France and Spain.

Bishop Cantwell is head of a great Diocese—more than 300,000 Catholics; 504 priests; 272 churches; 33 high schools, colleges and seminaries; 79 parish schools; approximately 45,000 children in Catholic schools; seven hospitals, four homes for the aged; three homes for working girls, and two for boys.

During Lent this year Bishop Cantwell directed a city-wide mission that was broadcasted over the Radio, and it was estimated that more than 10,000 people, non-Catholics and fallen-away Catholics were influenced to return to the Church through this mission.

INSECTS like to nest in damp places in the home.

An old-fashioned kitchen sink is a paradise for them. Why put up with this menace to health?

A modern, sanitary sink will eliminate them for all time and guard against disease germs, too.

Besides, it will bring Mother out of the kitchen quicker!

We will show you the newest designs.

Group Harmony Gives Satisfactory Results

The value of harmony in design in groups of houses and other structures is becoming more appreciated, as is evidenced by several housing schemes followed in certain other developments.

The American, when he builds for himself, has a strong desire for individuality of expression. This is shown in most any suburb where you will see a neighborhood of houses in which many styles of architecture, materials, color schemes, etc., are represented. The lines and shapes have no relation to each other, so that as you look at the group there is a spirit of unrest and clashing in many respects. The whole group lacks repose and the homelike feeling is interfered with, even although each individual house might be good enough in itself.

Possibly this result is a reaction from the individuals having previously lived in city rows of a stereotyped plan. Having been previously suppressed, when the opportunity offers they go to an extreme of expression, or possibly it might in some cases be due to the architect's desire to have the individuality of the house stand out or the wealth of materials and knowledge of styles which we have at our disposal may also tend to this variety in treatment. In any case the result is not entirely satisfactory and could be improved.

Variety and individuality sufficient for any reasonable nature may be obtained even when the buildings are designed with relation to each other, and harmonize in line, shape, materials, color, etc.

When this principle can be applied to residence subdivision a much more artistic result will be produced.

Plumbing Should Conform to Rigorous Standards

A good system of plumbing with a supply of pure water has been said to be the most important single contribution of modern civilization to comfort, health and elimination of disagreeable housework.

Anyone who has had experience with leaking, stopped up, or overflowing drainage systems needs no warning that good standards should be rigorously carried out.

A committee of sanitary engineers and plumbing experts, associated with the Department of Commerce, has formulated a set of basic plumbing principles which have been widely accepted by sanitary engineers.

Plants Add Cheer to Kitchen Window Sill

A geranium or other plant will add cheer to the kitchen window sill when chints and floral decorations on furniture are not used. Instead of common white muslin curtains which get so limp and require more frequent laundering, plaid or checked ginghams edged with the pointed dress braids meant for gingham dresses, colored Japanese crepes, hand-dyed unbleached muslin, calico and percales, now called "grandmother," or American prints, tiny sprigged and conventionalized patterns, have character. Other color notes may be pan-holders of plain color, towels bordered with color and glass towels of linitless Japanese crossbarred orange and white crepe and cut-outs of colored oilcloth applied on a clock shelf or on roller shades.

Pipes That Rust Are Sure to Cause Trouble

A matter of first importance in the building of the new home is the water supply system, and upon the pipe depends the supply of pure, clean water so necessary to home convenience and health and comfort of family. If pipe that rusts is used, in a short time it will begin to deteriorate; rust-stained water will flow from faucets into basins, baths, tubs and sinks.

Rust will clog the pipe, gradually reducing the flow of water to a trickle, and eventually rust will cause damaging leaks and necessitate expensive repair. These things will not happen at once; two or three years may pass before the first signs appear; they are inevitable if pipe that rusts is used.

When it was the custom to build houses with pipes exposed, it was comparatively easy to replace rusted piping. Good construction dictates that plumbing pipes be concealed beneath floors and behind walls; one reason is to safeguard them against frost. In order to replace even a short length of rusted, leaking pipe, the services of carpenter, plumber, plasterer and decorator are often required. Brass pipes installed in the plumbing system is a permanent protection against pipe failure caused by rust.

Remodel the Basement if More Room Is Needed

When the needs of a growing family get to the point where a little extra space would save a great deal of wear and tear on dispositions, go to the basement and ponder. Even if there is money with which to build an addition, even if architecture and ground make this possible, consider the possibilities of cellar conversion; to build an addition to the house is not economic when the removal of trash, usually a fire and health menace, from the cellar and the expenditure of a little thought, time and money will provide extra living space.

If the need is for additional sleeping accommodations, a sleeping porch built over the open porch or sunroom will probably solve the problem; but if the need is for a study room for the children, or a rainy day playroom, a den or office for dad, or space for entertaining, then a few extra electric outlets, a partition perhaps and some paint judiciously used below stairs will probably do the trick.

Great Care Needed in Building Roofs

Roofs made of overlapping units, such as shingles, slates and tiles, the form of roof used most commonly in home building, invite leaks and disaster when they are slapped on in any old way, and there will come a time when you will positively want to do violence if you use just any old quality of these units.

They make sound roofs if they are made right; good felt, good asphalt, good wood—cut and preserved as it should be—made by science and not by guess. If they are of proper materials and put on skillfully the wind will not blow them off. They will not curl or crack and let water down through the ceilings.

Let us stop our roof leaks before they happen by not taking a chance with questionable materials or poor workmanship. Buy roofing on the basis of reputation for service.

"Chalking" of Paint Causes Dark Patches

You no doubt have seen buildings which, after from six to twelve months from the time of painting, have shown very decided patches of bleached-out looking, pale spots.

Usually the remark is heard at this time that the particular paint used has faded badly. This may be so. In the majority of cases, however, it is not so.

The fault is that the paint used has failed or broken down too rapidly by what is known as "chalking." The pale-faded-spotty appearance is due to loose pigments freed from the vehicle and held as a powder on the surface. Wash this spot well with a damp cloth and the original color will reappear, showing that it is not "fading," but "chalking," which has spoiled the appearance of the property.
