Two Inches to Be Added to Skirts, Says Paris

Whether the American woman of fashion will follow the edicts of Paris modistes wherever they lead is a matter that is seriously concerning New York's interpreters of the mode these days. For Paris says skirts are coming down in the autumn!
The drop will not be radical—just an experiment with the knee line. Nevertheless it will be distinctly noticeable. Describing the early showing of autumn models, Marjorie Howard, European fashion editor of Harper's Bazar, writes:
"While evening skirts remain long or long in spots, daytime ones are trying hard to come down in the world also. Lelong, Louiseboulanger, Patou, Jane Regny, Goupy, all are bringing them down about two inches."
"For formal afternoon gowns, long points or dipping backs are often shown, especially in thin materials. One might say that the more formal the occasion, the longer the skirt."

Uncovered Forehead to Be Popular Fall Mode

Have you wondered whether the trend for the uncovered forehead would carry over into fall in the hat collections? It seems that it will, and many of the very newest models are showing either high points at one side of the forehead or the entire forehead revealed in some manner.

AN ORDER FOR SEARS-ROEBUCK

Mildred Resch was seven. She went to school and could read and count a little. Edwin, her brother, was five, "most six." Eddie said the "most six" was required by his honesty. At the moment, about which we are writing, the two children were in solemn converse in the doorway of the far corner of the attic, behind the big brick chimney.

"What will we get Mother for Christmas?" asked the serious Mildred.
"Edwin fell in his diminutive trousers' pockets, and finally deposited upon the rickety table that was tinned a leg, three dimes, five nickels and 20 pennies."
"It pends on how much you got," he answered, as he searched for more coins among a couple of handfuls of twine, mixed with chewing gum, chewed only once—nipples, tacks, a stub of a pencil, two screws and a knob from a cabinet drawer. A careful search failed to reveal any more money. Mildred looked at the little pile of dimes, nickels and pennies and a slow flush crept over her face. She kept her hand in her little apron pocket. Edwin grabbed her small brown fist.

"Put it on the table," he demanded. "I'll bet you have been spending some for ice cream cones."
"Only one," faltered Mildred, "and it was all pink and had nuts and raisins."
"Nuts and raisins," roared Edwin. "I could buy a tin duck that walks by the head of Bernie Bauman for a dime. But I'm member Muddie's present. A girl never is any good."
He scowled fiercely while Mildred deposited two dimes, two nickels and five pennies beside his own money.

Shattered Finances
"Count it," he said motioning toward the rickety table. "Maybe you can do that." Obediently Mildred did count it, just as she had taught to do at school when teacher let them play one and one was the storekeeper. Ten, 20, 30, 40, she counted aloud. Then she arranged the pennies in three lines of five each, and went through the same ceremony. Her lord and master stood with hands in pockets, his eyes glaring at her, as if to say, "more if you hadn't been eating ice cream right along," he said, when the final amount of one dollar was announced. Mildred did not answer. Silence was best under the circumstances.

"That's a lot of money," answered the little maid, finally, by way of diverting the boy's attention. Not for worlds would she have admitted the three big black jilt beans that reposed under her handkerchief in her apron pocket.
"Let's buy a baby," she suggested before her brother could think of more unpleasant things to say.
"A baby?" Edwin halted. "We've got one. That's Thelma. That's baby enough for this house."
"But wouldn't it be nice to have one to match her. There's room in Thelma's buggy for two."
"You can't buy them," scoffed Edwin.

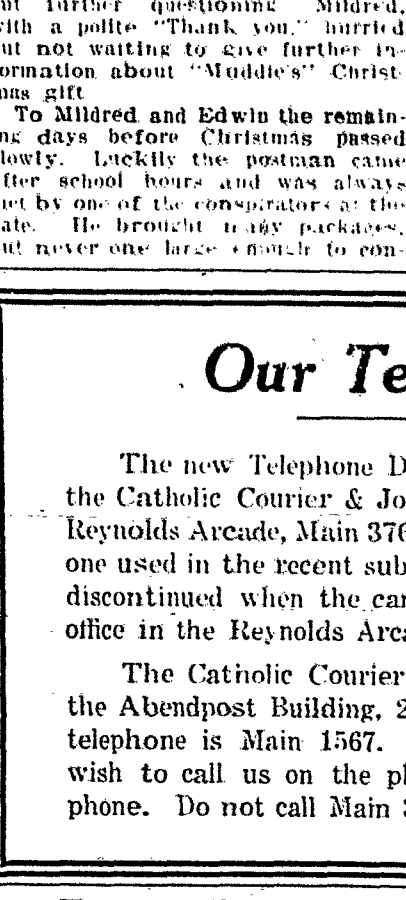

Bishop of Berlin Will Occupy Old Home of von Moltke

Coloche, Jan. 10.—The house where Moltke planned the wars of 1864, 1866, and 1870—the oldest military establishment of Greater Berlin—now has a more peaceful role. It will be the episcopal residence of the Rt. Rev. Christian Schreiber, Bishop of Berlin.
The Catholics of Berlin were facing a serious problem in finding a residence for the head of the newly established See that would be large enough and at the same time close to St. Hedwig's Cathedral. Through the benevolence of the Prussian Government, the difficulty has been eliminated.
The building in the Rehnstrasse, is at present occupied by the Reichswehr Gruppenkommando 1 but was vacated January 1 and made ready for the Bishop of Berlin and his household.

Bishop Fights Moose To Save Man's Life

Port Louis, Mauritius, Indian Ocean, Jan. 10.—(N. C. W. C. Files)—The Rt. Rev. James Leen, C.S.S.P., young Irish Bishop of Port Louis, Mauritius, in a vain attempt to save the life of a stranger, attacked a vicious moose which was killing the man.
Passing in an automobile, the prelate saw the moose coring his victim, and, armed with an axe, jumped from the car and went for the animal. After a strenuous fight he succeeded in driving off the moose, but the victim died a few hours later from wounds received.
Bishop Leen was born in Abbeyfeck, diocese of Limerick, Ireland, in 1888, and was ordained a priest in 1920. He was consecrated bishop in 1925 as coadjutor of Bishop Murphy, of Port Louis, whom he succeeded April 16, 1926. The diocese of Port Louis, on the island of Mauritius, in the Indian Ocean, off the African coast, dates back to 1847. Catholics number 117,490.
