Father Dan's Column

Fritz Mahaney (Chapter Two)

I know all of our youthful readers will enjoy stories about Catholic missionaries and mission work. Last Sunday we heard the priest read a letter about the work that is being done among the negro and Indians of our own country. I wonder if our first mission story should not be about these home missions. I am the only one in this school smart enough to tell a good mission story, so I am going to tell you this one. Margaret Driscoll was a girl rich here in our own school. Filled with a great love of God she determined at an early age to dedicate her life to His service in the mission field. She became a nun, and in course of time was sent to work among the Indians who inhabit the districts about the Ozark Mountains, in Missouri. This is one of the wildest stretches of country in all the United States. No city or town of any importance has ever been established there. Hundreds of the inhabitants have never seen a railroad train or trolley car. But it is a land dear to Almighty God; and it was here that Margaret Driscoll, known in religion as Mother Blanche, spent the best years of her life. And it was here that she performed most heroic sacrifices for the glory of God.

When the Iron Mountain railroad was completed from St. Louis into the heart of the Ozarks, Bishop Hennessy, then pastor of Iron Mountain, purchased Arcadia college from the Methodists, and invited the Ursuline Sisters to conduct it as a boarding school for girls. From this center the sisters went forth to evangelize the children in the mining camps, and soon established day schools at Arcadia, Iron Mountain, Pilot Knob and Graniteville. By their zeal and spirit of sacrifice they gradually dispelled the mist of ignorance and bigotry that had settled in the Arcadia valley, and made many converts. The most conspicuous among the latter was the daughter of a prominent frontier couple, who joined the Order, and as Mother Blanche, labored faithfully to establish religion in the Ozarks.

When Father Lawrence Werner succeeded Bishop Hennessy, he was chaplain of Arcadia college, and became pastor of a territory one hundred miles square, that had a Catholic population of about one hundred families. Observing the excellent work done by Mother Blanche at Pilot Knob, Father Werner had her put in charge of the more promising school at Graniteville. It never entered the mind of Mother Blanche to confine her labors to the classroom. There indeed she drilled the children in the practice of their religion, and gave them a thorough knowledge of the necessary branches of secular learning. But through

Double-Breasted Dress for Women After Fifty

Considering spring styles for women after fifty we may be grateful for the new soft treatments about the neck, says the Woman's Home Companion in the gray flat crepe sketched, the V neck is outlined becomingly with a jabot collar faced with white chiffon. Falling as it does in flares which show the facing this is the type of collar that flatters. Then there is the double-breasted front with its two rows of crystal buttons, the close-fitting hip yoke slanting down at the sides, the plaques below—all these give a beautiful length of line. White chiffon embroidered with gray dots is used to finish the dress at the neck and wrists. White dots are embroidered on the crepe just above the chiffon cuffs. This style makes up well in a printed silk as well as a plain, especially one of the small evenly scattered colored designs. Navy blue crepe de chine trimmed with beige or gray would also be smart and could be made up inexpensively. Canton crepe, finely checked, is another good material for after fifty and the lightweight woolsens or even a cotton print are other smart possibilities.

Black, White, Green, Blue, for Spring and Summer

Black and black-and-white are well in the lead among the plain colors which are promised importance for early spring street-wear, says a fashion writer in the New York Times. Navy blue is second, being apparently scheduled for a greater popularity than in many seasons. Green is next, and beige, a spring classic, is in favor both in tweeds and more formal fabrics.

For evening wear preference is given to the dusty pastel shades, especially the pinks and blues, which have been enjoying a great vogue in Palm Beach. There is a wide range of shades in these two colors, the pinks including the peach pinks, apricot pink and the new hon-hon shade. Blues-including peewee blue, sky blue and the turquoise tones, which are especially good with sultan.

The present popularity of white for evening also bids fair to continue during the spring and summer months. It is being worn in satin, flat crepe and chiffon in the South.

Evening Handkerchiefs Are Longer Than Ever

Prints for the most part are reserved for accessories to add zest to solid color costumes or those having patterns woven into the material. Handkerchief prints are unusually modern.

Evening handkerchiefs are longer than ever—reaching knee-length when trailing from the hand, to give you some idea of their size.

A printed chiffon handkerchief with a flower cluster in matching color is a new type.

Flowers occasionally appear on evening dress. And, with the arrival of fur coats, they will be worn for a color note. Violets with the new pearl luster are lovely with furs and velvets. These are in natural coloring as well as other shades. Three velvet and silk roses are posed at the back of the décolletage on some evening gowns.

Rich Fabrics Are Used for Popular Negligees

Whether or not the trousered pajamas would survive the trend toward extreme femininity is a question soon settled by the appearance of hostess negligees made of luxurious fabrics in distinctly feminine styles. Lame, velvet, chiffon and other lovely materials of the mode combine to add beauty and richness to the pajama fashion. Even the uneven hemline appears in the pajama whose trouser hems trail gracefully. The flowing sleeves, smart peplums, and lovely style details that characterize new tea gowns also adorn the garment.

Fringe Vogue

A white fringe sounce, posed diagonally on a white satin evening gown, gives a distinguished touch of femininity to the costume.

Warm Approval Given Almshouse By New Society

The St. Francis Charitable Society held a meeting in the Columbus Civic Center on Tuesday evening this week and adopted a resolution heartily approving the action of the Monroe County Board of Supervisors in providing for a new almshouse. Heartly approval was given likewise to the old-age pension bill, and to a measure providing for more liberal pensions for widows.

Rev. Francis Burns, professor at St. Bernard's Seminary, read a paper explaining the principal features of the old-age pension bill and the new almshouse. Some discussion resolutions endorsing the proposals were distributed to the Monroe County senators and assemblymen at Albany.

St. Francis Charitable Society is a new Catholic social welfare organization of volunteer workers. The officers are: President, John B. Keating; vice-president, Mrs. Frank T. Curtin; secretary, Frederick J. Mix; treasurer, Rhea Wall.
