St. Joseph's Hospital, Elmira, Plans Million-Dollar Annex, Memorial to Late E. J. Dunn

Elmira, March 14.—St. Joseph's Hospital in this city has completed plans for the erection of a new Nurses' Home and hospital annex, 10 stories in height. The new building, complete, will cost approximately $1,000,000. Work will be started soon, and it is hoped to have it finished within a year.

The new building will have a large auditorium, dining room, library, chapel, offices, laboratories, recreation rooms and nearly 200 bedrooms. It will be of fireproof construction and of Renaissance type. It will be of brick, with terra cotta trim.

Funds for the building were provided by the will of the late Edward J. Dunn, financier and philanthropist, who was a generous friend of the hospital during his life. The building will be a memorial to him, Haskett & Conidine, Elmira architects, designed the structure and prepared plans and specifications. It will be erected on the Dewitt Avenue site, acquired recently by the hospital management, adjacent to the comparatively new surgical building at the northeast corner of East Market Street and Dewitt Avenue.

Some of the Details

The auditorium, 47 by 96 feet in size, will take up part of the basement and first floor. It will have a large stage and will be well equipped.

The main dining room, 45 by 46 feet, will take up the rest of the basement, with a private dining room and serving room. On the first floor there will be the offices of the superintendent and other officials, reading room, library, recreation, reception, living and dining room.

The second and third floors of the wing will contain the chapel, a large main altar and two small altars. There will also be an organ and choir loft.

In the main portion of the second floor there will be two large class rooms for the instruction of student nurses, a demonstration ward, laboratory, science laboratory, reference library and two guest chambers.

All of the third floor except the east wing will be utilized as living quarters by the nuns. Here, also, is the entrance to the choir balcony of the chapel. There will be 12 bed chambers, a large sun porch facing east, living room and sewing room.

The fourth to the ninth floors will be made up almost exclusively of bed rooms, lavatories and baths. There will be 29 rooms on each floor, a total of 174.

In the center of the 10th floor will be a tea room adjoined by a kitchenette and lounge. It will be flanked on the north and south by two large solariums.

A Successful Institution

St. Joseph's Hospital has been a most successful institution. It is conducted by the Sisters of St. Joseph, and it cares for approximately 4,000 patients a year. There are about 100 nurses and Sisters in the institution, and there is a first class Nurses' Training School connected with the hospital. The people of the city and surrounding places have a warm regard for the hospital and for the Sisters in charge, and their work has made them greatly beloved by all classes of people. All Elmira will be interested in the new building, and will be proud of it.

ITHACA Pre-Lenten Events By the C. D. of A.

Ithaca, March 14.—Court Santa Maria No. 240, Catholic Daughters of America, was very busy during pre-Lenten days. Late in February the committee of the month staged a play at the Little Theatre. Only members and their friends were present. "School Daze" was the show. The time, supposed to be 40 years ago, might well have been only 20, so well did the characters remind the audience of long-forgotten school mates. The dunces, teachers' pet, the lazy boy and the studious one, the tom boy and the perfect lady were taken. Each of the cast portrayed her part to perfection. Just as the teacher today is the pivot around which the day's activities turn, so in the play, Miss Agnes Fohan as Miss Simpkins, the teacher, provided each one with her necessary clue.

An Irish Program

On March 14th, Prof. George DeLoane, teacher of piano, voice and violin and organist at St. John's Episcopal Church, gave a lecture-concert of Irish music. Prof. DeLoane said: "Ireland has always been a country of sweet songs and sweet singers. The harp is its emblem. In older times the minstrels used to wander with their harps, from place to place, singing the great songs of their native land. These songs were not written down and were in danger of being lost when Thomas Moore, the great poet, born in 1779, set many of the old traditional melodies to new words."

"In the 19th century two musicians arose, Michael William Balfe and Sir Charles Villiers Stanford, both of whom wrote great music. Balfe wrote 'The Bohemian Girl' and Stanford published several volumes of Irish folk songs."

James L. Molloy, born in 1827, is best remembered for 'The Kerry Dance' and 'Love's Old Sweet Song.' John L. Hutton and Sir John Stevenson, English composers, contributed much to the development of Irish music.

Prof. DeLoane spoke of Irish singers of recent years—O'Connell, O'Keefe, Andrew Mack and John McCormack—whose lovely voices have helped us enjoy the grand old songs of Ireland.

He distinguished the two great dances of Ireland, the reel and the jig, by the use of the piano, followed by Victor records.

The ancient music of Ireland is beautiful, but modern composers continue to produce music of great beauty, including "Mother Machree," "A Little Bit of Heaven" and others.

Prof. DeLoane sang Irish songs, to illustrate various points in the lecture. A Victrola with Victor records were used for other numbers.

The lecture closed with everyone singing several familiar Irish songs. This lecture-concert will long be remembered by the Daughters for its charm and the renewed interest in the culture of old Ireland.

Rev. Dr. Cronin, Catholic student chaplain at Cornell, was a guest. He expressed his pleasure and appreciation of the program and the opportunity of greeting the members of the Court.

During this time our Pastor and Chaplain, Rev. Father Byrne is a patient in a Rochester Hospital. It is the sincere wish, not only of the Court, but of the parish and city, that we may soon welcome him home.

Medical Mission Day To Be Observed On March the 18th

New York, March 14.—Medical Mission Day, heretofore observed on October 18, will be observed hereafter on March 18, beginning this year. The reason for this change is that it was found that October 18 interfered with the Mission Sunday day observed in many dioceses about that time, and with other events usually held in the latter part of October, while the 18th of March falls in Lent and at a time when in most dioceses it will not interfere with other events.

Last year the Catholic Medical Mission Board sent out 229 large cases of medical supplies, or about 16,000 pounds, to 125 different missions all over the world. This year the society hope to double or triple that quantity of relief. Many missionaries and their flocks pray fervently for their benefactors. The Rev. Edward F. Garsche, S. J., is the director of the Catholic Medical Mission Board. The national offices are at 25 West Broadway, New York City.

Many Nationalities Are Represented In Mass In London

Cologne, March 14.—The following portion of a letter, written by a German priest in London and published in a number of German papers, illustrates the internationality of Catholicism:

"In London a French priest sang the Mass, I assisted at a Mass, a Polish priest was subdeacon, the acolytes were Irish and English, a Scot was master of ceremonies, and the choir were a Hildon and a Spaniard."

"After Mass the French priest said: 'Today France at the hands of Germany the King of Spain and Germany gave it this island, to Scotland, et al.' It should be in political relations as well."

Mission Opened In West Africa After 87 Years

Monrovia, Liberia, West Africa, March 14.—The re-opening of the Catholic mission at Cape Palmas, Liberia, West Africa, after a lapse of 87 years, recalls the memorable labors of the pioneer American missionaries in West Africa, Monsignor Barron and Father Kelly of Philadelphia. These two men, one a Vicar-General of his diocese, left their native land when America was still young in Catholicity and the Church was in its infancy. Their story is closely connected with the history of the Republic of Liberia.

This interesting negro republic is an offspring of America, having been founded as a colony for freed negro slaves. When the first settlers arrived from the United States, Protestant sects were active and sent their Methodists and Episcopalians in 1850 and 1851. Their efforts were confined mainly to the American-born negroes, and the vast interior regions remained pagan.

At the request of Pope Gregory XVI, Bishop England of Philadelphia and Bishop Kenrick of Philadelphia tried to get priests for the neglected Catholic Missionary District, West General of Philadelphia. Father Kelly and Brother Hendry volunteered for the work. On their arrival at Cape Palmas in 1847, they found only 20 Maryland Catholics in the place. Monsignor Barron journeyed to Europe for men and money to convert the pagans and returned with seven priests from France. War between the settlers and the natives and still more deadly the one that earned for West Africa the title of "White Man's Grave" interfered with the work. Though other priests recruited the ranks in a few years all died except Monsignor Barron and Father Kelly, who were forced to return to America in shattered health in 1848.
