How Bandits Killed Bishop and Priest in Southern China

Several members of Chinese and Japanese soldiers will be played by the Nazareth Academy Orchestra at the presentation of the Oriental comedy and drama, "East Is West"...

On the morning of February 25th, the Bishop and his little party rowed up stream and entered the Su Pak Kong, Little North River. About midday, when they were in the neighborhood of Li Tau Tsui, a small village on the left bank of the river they saw the Angles together.

Just then the robbers noticed the Chinese Sister and the two lay teachers, who were revealed to them, by the waving of the boat, and rushed to carry them to the bank.

The Bishop tried, with worthless words, to soften their hearts. The attacks became furious and struck both his Lordship and Father Caravario again and again with the butt ends of their rifles and with thick pieces of firewood.

When the Bishop and Father Caravario, who had done all they could to protect the girls, were rendered practically unconscious, the bandits made another effort to seize the three.

In the minds of the counsellors of the Knights of Columbus, said Bishop O'Hern, "when men have proven themselves worthy of their Church, their Country and their glorious Citizenship, then and then only may they be received as members of the Fourth Degree, and pledge, as such members, even a more loyal and devoted patriotism to their country than ever professed up to that time."
