Italian Paper Raps Pilgrimage Of Methodists

Criticizes Proposed Italian-American-Methodist Visit to Italy and Makes Ironical Comment Upon it.

Rome, July 25.—La Tribuna, a leading daily paper in Rome, Italy, contained a sharp editorial Saturday on a proposed Italian-American-Methodist pilgrimage to Italy. The paper criticizes the proposed pilgrimage, and calls it "An Undesirable American Pilgrimage."

The article says: "This does not seem a very opportune time to have the Protestant Anglo-American pilgrimage with us. In the eighth year of the Fascist regime which composed differences between the Church and State."

"Protestants in alliance with Masonry gladly availed themselves of that difference until the day when Fascism, restoring the fortunes of Italy, restored its full value to the Catholic faith, which is so large a part of the history of the civilization of Italy, and dismissed all adulterations which in darkness and in light were poisoning the life of our country."

Referring to a statement that the pilgrimage intended visiting the spot in Italy "memorable to Protestantism," La Tribuna ironically adds: "This news teaches us something we did not know—that there are in Italy places memorable to Italian Protestantism. In truth we did not know until now that there was Italian Protestantism and much less that it had memorable spots on our soil."

Eucharistic Congress In 1932 In Ireland Will Mark Fifteenth Centenary Of Isle's Conversion

It Was in the Year 432 That Pope Celestine Sent St. Patrick to Ireland to Convert the People to The Church of God.

When the Rev. Charles F. Shay, rector of the Cathedral, heads a pilgrimage from Rochester for Ireland, for the Eucharistic Congress in Dublin in 1932, he will take them there to help celebrate the fifteenth hundred anniversary of the conversion of Ireland from Druidism to the Church of God. It will be a great event and a great celebration.

Just as the Eucharistic Congress of 1930 marked the fifteenth centenary of St. Augustine, so the Congress on 1932 in Dublin will coincide with the fifteenth centenary of the conversion of Ireland. It was in 432 that Pope Celestine I sent St. Patrick to evangelize the Irish people. And every one knows with what magnificent results this mission was accomplished not only in Ireland but in Europe as well, and in the centuries that followed, throughout the world.

Predetermined For Missions. A land predestined for missions, Ireland sent her sons first to help in the conversion of Europe, then into the British colonies and, eventually, into the United States. From the little green Isle of St. Patrick, an unceasing army of monks, priests and other missionaries have gone to every corner of the world. Both New Zealand, and Austria owe their Catholicism to Ireland, and a large proportion of the American clergy is of Irish origin.

The people of present-day Ireland are looking forward to a dual celebration in 1932, the International Eucharistic Congress with its manifold spiritual blessings, and the return to Erin of thousands of her sons and their sons, scattered now to the ends of the world.

Church History For 1,000 Years In Art Exhibit

Munich, July 25.—Art treasures of great historical interest and value are included in an exhibition held in Munich. The oldest exhibit is a Bishop's crest of the sixth century. Other exhibits are the cup of gold and silver presented by Duke Tassilo of Bavaria in 777 to the Kremsmünster monastery, Kaiser Arnulf's Carolingian altar, dating from the end of the ninth century, a Roman cup and reliquary from the beginning of the eleventh century, once the property of Kaiser Heinrich II, and a great number of bishops' and abbots' staffs and monstrances. The exhibits cover 1,000 years of church history.

Rev. William M. Sullivan. Philadelphia, July 25.—The Rev. William M. Sullivan, rector of St. Anne's Catholic Church in this city, died in the Misericordia Hospital from a stroke suffered on Wednesday. He was 52 years old. Born at St. Clair, Pa., he studied for the priesthood at the Seminary of St. Charles Borromeo in Overbrook and was ordained 25 years ago.

New Book Stalls In The Cathedral In New York City

And Holy Water Font for the People, with Water Blessed Twenty Gallons at a Time.

New York City, July 25.—A tiny room with book stalls has been built into the wall of St. Patrick's Cathedral at the foot of the aisle on the Fifth Street side, just inside the door. The stalls are of carved quartered oak to correspond with the Cardinal's throne and other woodwork in the sanctuary. In the center is a holy water font from which everyone can draw water to take home. It is blessed by one of the priests twenty gallons at a time. So far there has been only a book rack far to the right of the ambulatory.

The little room represents the realization of a wish often expressed by Msgr. Michael J. Lavelle, rector of the cathedral, who is constantly telling his parishioners to inform themselves regarding the details of their faith. There will be a receptacle above each publication in which to place a coin covering its cost price. The stall will contain booklets of devotions and explanations of doctrine. The room is one of the improvements in preparation for the celebration of the cathedral's golden jubilee.

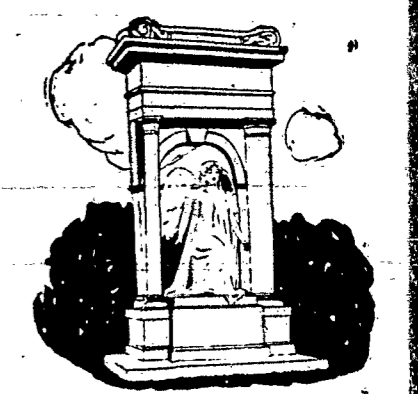

The hero of the week in the minor leagues could very well be a youngster, one Bobb's Trotter, who pitched a sensational game for the Robins Tuesday against the Cardinals and batted Brooklyn's descent from the lead. The rookie let the St. Louis buggers down with three hits and won his game 1-0. "Clete" Robb's pitching staff has suffered a setback, and he has been cast out from the league. He was used as a last resort. However, he came through nicely and will probably see more frequent service.

Sammy Mandell sure lost his title in his time last week. Al Singer sprang across the ring and let fly so many gloves that the champion could not withstand the battering. A few seconds less than two minutes was the official time announced. There are chances for a bout between Singer and Kid Chocolate. It is very evident that the New York boy does not wish to fight the "Red," and vice versa at that. If the pair are matched it is the writer's belief that the swarthy one will give the new champ a lesson in masterful boxing.

Next Monday night Ernie Schadt and Johnny Risko, heavyweights, will meet in the main event of the Sequel Stadium in Philadelphia. Both boys are about the only ones who are doing any fighting in the heavy class and this match will draw a fair-sized crowd. The writer feels in a predicting mood and his selection is Risko. The Cleveland boxer is getting into fine condition at Philadelphia and is on the path toward another battle with Schmidt, his conqueror in a nine-round knockout.
