Cayuga County Doctors Addressed by Bp. O'Hern At Their Annual Meeting

ple a kindly regard for the ill and aged. To learn in Holy Writ that they came to Him and they brought to Him the lame and the blind, the sick and the leprous, and about Him they lay on pallets and stretchers awaiting the healing touch of His divine hand. And curiously it was about the shrines of the new faith that the people gathered in their quest of restoration of health, and it was in the infirmaries of the monasteries that in thousands dotted the countries of Europe in the early centuries of the Church, that there gradually developed a separate branch of monastic endeavor, in time housed in a separate building, that early was called a hospital.

The Word Hospice
"The word hospice meant not only a place of welcome, comfort and attention to the ailing, but also an institution where the spiritual welfare of the patient might be cared for. What a beautiful thought! retorted St. Landry, Bishop of Paris, to call the hospital founded by him in the Seventh Century the Hotel Dieu, God's house for many Early in the Eleventh Century Canterbury's archbishop founded two hospitals, and within two centuries some of the most celebrated establishments for the sick in England, notably the Five Royal Hospitals, were built.

"What a wonderful army of men, under vows to perform the corporal works of mercy, visit and care for the sick, labored in the institutions, caring for the people in times of epidemic, in the distress of war and giving tender care and sustenance to those so often ill because of poverty.

The Day of the Hospital
"This is the day of the hospital. Millions and millions of dollars have been given freely by the over-rich to establish these institutions, especially in our country, and millions and millions more of dollars have been generously given by the people, often by those of little means, to not only help build hospitals but also to maintain them. Three hundred million dollars have been spent in building hospitals in one recent year in the United States, and in this country three hundred and sixty-five million dollars, a million a day, is the cost of maintaining them. With in 19 years there has been an increase of 125 per cent in the number of hospitals in the United States.

In Civic Advancement
"In civic advancement this is the day of the hospital. Without it progress to better civilization advancing to that humanitarianism of the loving father, which returns a mother and her new-born babe to the home, which restores the weaklings of the cities, which provides for the industry, all it forms its laborers, which protects all the rich and the poor, against the advance of epidemic communicable disease, which guards the community at large against the vagaries and outbreaks of the mentally ailing, which restores to such a large per cent of these afflicted, by rest and tender care, their reason, and returns them to the enjoyment of life.

"In the change in social life—and by this I mean a more equitable and fair adjustment of the relation of man to man, this is the day of the hospital. Man's humanity, the man is being lessened; that each to a certain extent is his brother's keeper is being more recognized; that the state may have strong and valiant defenders in time of war, and well sustaining citizens for their well being through life to the great is being considered. We have for the expectant mother to receive instructions as to the proper care of herself that her child may be born well, and to which come:

"Babies, 'neath the hearts of mothers, labored from one to the other. Sketch of His Work "In 1898 he came to the Paulist Community, a student for the priesthood at the age of twenty. He was ordained a priest in 1903. For a number of years he labored in the mission field, particularly in our southland where his name is revered today. Later he was sent to Rome for post-graduate study, and there he was awarded the doctor's degree in both theology and canon law. Returning to America, he served as professor in the Paulist House of Studies at Washington, D. C. In 1922 he was appointed rector of the Apostolic Mission House and Editor of The Missionary, which office he filled until his death.

"The ill are no longer are for in the home, children are no longer born under the roof of their parents' grandparent's roof. The name sections of the public welfare law recently in effect the indigent and the near poor of the community are entitled to hospital care and skilled treatment.

Value of Human Life
"At the state generally, the value of the life of each of its citizens and has even placed an average value of over $5,000 on the same. And it realizes in order that it may get the greatest return from this valuation, this human machine, it provides for its maintenance, its protection in case of injuries or illness, and is restored to usual labor as soon as possible. Authorities claim that the time absent from labor of those hospital-treated is but a fraction of that of those home-cared for. And it is not only the cost that the average state is saving, but the lives that have been reduced in recent years from 23 days to 12 days. In this great country of 125,000,000 people, what a great economic saving, also is affected.

"All this means that civically, socially, industrially and economically, the hospital has become a very necessary part of our modern life.

Duty of the Community
Bishop O'Hern spoke of the duty of the community towards hospitals. He said the people of every community should patronize their own hospitals and give as generously as possible towards their support. Less patients, less income, less gifts and donation from friends—these things are worrying all hospitals, he said. Millions of dollars are being spent for additional hospitals for the care of veterans, and Bishop O'Hern said the neighboring city of Canton is to have a 100-bed hospital, costing millions of dollars, states are following, in this example, and many are looking forward to having a county hospital in every county. This, Bishop O'Hern said, may finally lead to state hospitalization, and that means eventually state medicine. This amounts practically to a confiscation of other hospitals built at an expense of millions of dollars.

Every hospital should have all classes of people represented on its board, Bishop O'Hern said, and every doctor should have a hospital connection. For hospitals raise the standard of doctors of a community.

Praises Local Institutions
Bishop O'Hern praised the Auburn City Hospital for its splendid work, the Cayuga County Laboratory, and the Mercy Hospital, whose doors, he said, would always be open to the ill or ailing, "no matter what their creed or race or previous condition." He asked the hearty co-operation of the doctors in behalf of Mercy Hospital, now in its infancy. His talk was heard with the utmost attention, and the meeting was declared the most interesting and instructive ever held in the history of the Cayuga County Medical Society.

AURORA

Woman Killed Going to Church

Aurora, Dec. 26.—Mrs. Louis McKillop, aged 50 years, was struck and fatally injured about 8 o'clock Saturday evening while crossing Main street in this village on her way to St. Patrick's Church. She was carried into the home of Rev. J. J. Doerbeck, pastor of St. Patrick's, and Dr. L. D. Burlington was summoned. She was so badly injured that she could do nothing to help her. Father Doerbeck announced her, and she died in a short time.

Herbert Brennan of Sherwood was driver of the car. After an investigation by Sheriff Earl J. Morgan and Dr. W. L. Corey, coroner, her death was held accidental. Her son, George, aged 27, was with Mrs. McKillop at the time, but was ahead of her. When he saw the Brennan auto coming towards them he called to his mother to be careful.

Mrs. McKillop is survived by her husband, four sons and one daughter. Her death is deeply mourned by her family and friends.

would use the press to extend the message. With zeal he spent himself in this labor, and it was the life.
For the Army and Navy
"We see in all this but a portion of Father O'Hern's work. Until the appointment of our beloved Cardinal Hayes as Chaplain Bishop of all the Catholic chaplains in the United States Army and Navy, the important matter of the selection, appointment and percentage of Catholic chaplains rested for years in the hands of Father O'Hern. The burden was a heavy, an almost impossible one. It became the heavier when the United States entered the World War. The question of the percentage to be fixed of Catholic chaplains in our Army and Navy was a most critical one. Considering the religious and spiritual care of our nine hundred thousand Catholic soldiers and sailors. That it was fixed at an adequate percentage was due to the labors of Father O'Hern. He spent himself in the effort. Later, when the work was efficiently organized by Cardinal Hayes as Chaplain Bishop, Father O'Hern served His Eminence as Executive Secretary in Washington until the time of his death.

"Father O'Hern's patriotic service in the days of our country's need may fittingly be chronicled to his own honor, to the honor of the Church in this country.

Warmth Like the Sun
"Father O'Hern's work brought him in touch with public affairs, with men in public office, with public questions most important. Here again I might speak of his ability and his skill as a diplomat. But these were very secondary. The men he dealt with, and among them were Catholics, Protestants, Jews and unbelievers, will all tell you there was something or another world about the man—not of remoteness, or of isolation, or of sadness, but of a
