Yesterday's Vision Today's Necessity In May, 1882, the Rochester Common Council went on record in favor of underground lines. It said: "The place for wires should be underground." At that time, there were no underground lines. Lighting, telephone and fire alarm wires were strung across house tops, only a portion of them being strung on poles. How gratified some of those old pioneers would feel today, could they again be in Rochester, for many of them have passed on. They would find that Rochester actually has done what they foresaw to be the right thing to do from the standpoint of engineering, safety and ultimate economy. Rochester today has more underground cables per customer than any other city in the State including Greater New York. Such construction costs four times as much as overhead construction, but it is worth it to all concerned. Underground provides safer and more dependable service with greatly reduced hazards to the public and, best of all, permits safety to maintain high standards in civic beauty because underground lines can never become eyesores. Rochester City Fathers have always cooperated with this Company in planning for the future as well as the present welfare of Rochesterians. That is why sections of overhead lines each year have been placed underground. That is why Rochester today has an efficient and ample electric power, heating and lighting service, one that has not interfered with the development of a high standard of civic beauty and public safety. The Menace Dies, And the Monitor Shovels the Mud Aurora, Mo., March 27.—"The Menace," notorious anti-Catholic sheet founded in 1911, has gone to the boneyard of the forgotten derailed. It is officially dead, and will take ink no more. W. P. "Billy" Parker founded it, and at one time it had 1,500,000 subscribers. It shivered in their boots and woke every time they thought of the Pope. When the World War came its circulation dropped like the Prince of Wales falling off a horse. Then Parker sold it and went South to be murdered by a fellow hundred per center. "The Monitor" succeeds "The Menace." In other words, it has started to shovel the mud where its predecessor left off. An excuse is worse and more terrible than a lie; for an excuse is a lie guarded.—Pope. It is not so easy as people suppose to hate continually. —Tallyrand.
