

THE ROAD TO PADDY HILL

(Adapted by Father-Dan)

A big road circles round the world, and fine it is, they say; But the little boreen of my heart, runs lone and far away...

O twilight boreen of my heart, the world is vague and vast, But you are holy with the hymn of all my hallowed past...

Sure, all that's left of those I loved is reeling near my home, And every dawn I go to Mass across a greening loam...

There are Gallera and Nearys, there are Deatys, sorrow-free; And McGuire, true, is sleeping beneath an olden tree...

O, there flashes oft before me, the story of the years, And I see the well-loved faces through the silly mist of tears...

The lark keeps lifting now and then as neighbors saunter in, With many a kind "God save all here," and "God save you again..."

I wonder where they are to-night, for sure, when all is told "The feeling out of place they'd be, the streets of Burnside gold..."

Anthony Culhane Funeral Home Is At Your Service

When death occurs, whoever is to bear the responsibility of making the necessary arrangements will find the obligation much lighter if the steps that must be taken are known...

Some people make arrangements for their last rites, informing friends and relatives what course of action they wish taken.

Funeral customs have changed much in the last quarter of a century. The atmosphere of gloom deliberately and artificially created in the funeral of 50 years ago has vanished.

There is no profession more indispensable to a community than that of the funeral director.

Although you have several saints as patrons, be particularly devoted to St. Joseph. He is very powerful with God.
