Annual Retreat Plans Complete For the Laymen

More Than Two Hundred Reservations Made—Committees Are Named for Organization and for the Parishes.

Plans are complete for the annual Laymen's Retreat, to be held in St. Bernard's Seminary from June 19th to June 22d. Thus far more than 200 reservations have been made, and the retreat promises to be the largest ever held by laymen in the Diocese. Other reservations will be accepted, and may be made by calling the Secretary of the retreat, Charles A. Tucker, at his home, Culver 1499-W.

The retreat will be in charge of Rev. Joseph L. Turner, C. S. S. R. of Long Beach, N. J., and will commence at six o'clock next Friday.

Bronze Tablet Is Planned For Auburn Priest

Auburn, June 12.—A beautiful bronze tablet will be placed in the new Mercy Hospital in Auburn, when the building is opened in September, in memory of the late Rev. Herbert Regembogen, who was pastor of St. Aloysius Church here for 25 years, and who died on January 17, 1924.

Monday evening, June 22d, a festival will be held on the St. Alphonsus school grounds, and proceeds of this will go into the tablet fund. Those sponsoring the festival are members of the Immaculate Heart of Mary Society, Young Ladies' Society and the Holy Name Society of St. Alphonsus Church.

Items of Interest From WHAM

The Rochester Civic Orchestra's Program at 9 o'clock Monday night, June 15th, will be comprised of music of lighter nature and wider appeal than during the past winter and spring months, featuring such works as "Finlandia," the "Cello Marche" by Grieg and "Pippinella" "Adoration" by Kreisler, included in the NBC-WJZ broadcast from WHAM will be a "Prelude" by Jannfelt and ballet music from Schubert's "Romeo and Juliet."

shady end of the porch and conversation was doing extremely well without her assistance, Sara tried to study the newcomer. But instead, her critical faculties turned on herself. How stupid she had been when her sister had introduced him, how very little she was doing to live up to her family's opinion of her.

Before long, however, she forgot herself in her keen amusement at the clever talk. Sara fondly watched the pretty arts in which Hedda was indulging. She certainly was attractive! How pretty her hair looked, soft and fluffy, with tresses flying in the breeze. Sara said very little, but she had been aware more than once of a curious and interested look cast in her direction by the guest. It was with relief that she saw Lois coming up the lane from the village.

"Here's another member of the Leavitt family," cried Hedda. "Meet my sister, Lois, Mr. Cramer. She's the baby of the family."

"I will say, Miss Lois, that many times it is decidedly annoying to occupy that place in a family circle as I well know from experience. They never let us grow up, do they?" Mr. Cramer spoke in perfectly modulated tones, rising and bowing to an embarrassed Lois.

During dinner he took command of the situation. With easy assurance he managed to keep the conversation along pleasant topics. Sara watched him critically. She wondered how he had acquired the soft cadence in his voice. She wondered if he enjoyed the rather plain home cooked food as much as he said he did, and if he really was having as good a time as he appeared to be having. His geniality was contagious. He made Sara forget the cracked dishes and wobbly table. He made her not forget about money matters. He made Lois forget Billy Miller.

"What a charming old place this is!" Mr. Cramer exclaimed, finishing a second cup of coffee and leaning back in his chair. "Cherry Lane! The name just suits it!"

"The Lane hasn't many cherry trees left now," said Nat. "You can imagine what a pretty sight it was when the cherry trees were in bloom on both sides of the lane all the way down to the village."

"Did you notice the one with the platform built in it?" Sara asked. "Nat and Hedda had a play house in that for years."

"No, but I'll look for that the next time I pass along the lane. The house, too, is venerable," Mr. Cramer said, glancing up at the walls.

"Oh, yes," chirped Hedda, "it was built by our great-grandfather Leavitt."

"And the poorest branch of the family," volunteered Sara, "has to stay and take care of it."

Lincoln Laundry Gladdens Hearts Of Housewives

Let the laundry do the work. How many times have you, the housewife, heard that statement? How many of you have listened to that statement and sent the family wash to the laundry? If you still do the family wash, you are missing many hours of leisure, or hours you can devote to something else. There is no sense, nowadays, to spend several hours every week washing, waiting your strength over a wash tub. Laundry can take that work away and return clothes better, we may say, than the housewife can do them.

Did you, many hours are spent every Monday over the wash tub, and the hours devoted on Tuesday to the ironing board? If not, just take a pencil and paper and figure it out. Those hours, as said before, can be devoted to something else.

There is no waste for women to grow old slaving over housework, especially the wash tub. In this vicinity there are many laundries that do the wash for hundreds of housewives. Why not let them do your wash?

One of the most prominent laundries is the Lincoln Laundry at 89 Jay Street. If you have finally settled the question and want the laundry to do the work, call Main 4348 and ask them to call for your clothes. Their prices are right, their work excellent.

A Barber Shop That Appeals To All Patrons

Louis Phaler & Son Barber Shop. That is the name of the business in which Louis Phaler & Son are engaged, but it does not convey the information that they conduct one of the most modern and sanitary barber shops in Rochester. It is located at 12 Main Street West in the Powers Block and is one of the places popular with the business and professional men who demand first-class service in shaving, hair-cutting and electric massage.

The shop has eight chairs, in charge of experienced barbers, which is sufficient to handle a long waiting Mr. Phaler, prior to opening his new shop, was for many years located in the Powers Block in State Street and for the past ten years has been at the Exchange Place Bldg., uptown. His son at that time became one of the kind the Louis Phaler & Son Barber Shop is equipped with all facilities for the comfort and convenience of patrons.

Louis Phaler & Son have witnessed many changes in the barber shop business and have kept abreast with the times. They have gained the confidence of their customers, many of whom have been regular visitors to the shop for years, and the newer patrons once they have become acquainted with the service offered, request their return.

The reputation of this shop is its own guarantee of satisfaction.

Institute Holds Spring Festival; Bishop Speaker

The Genesee Institute held a Spring Festival Friday evening in its auditorium, Central Park and North Union Street, and the Rt. Rev. John Francis O'Hern, D.D., Bishop of Rochester, was speaker of the evening. Five hundred Italian people heard him speak their language fluently and beautifully, and they applauded him heartily. Josephine Porruce gave the address of welcome. An exhibit of handwork was a feature. The articles on display were made by the various units of the Institute, and were very beautiful.

The program included a piano solo by Sadie Ora, Dutch dance by Laura and Margaret Montone; singing by the settlement chorus, and a recital of Scout laws. Arrangements were in charge of Miss Anne Gray, supervisor of the Institute's work.

The organization supervises the work of a Little Mothers' Club, a Girls' Club and Boy Scouts, as well as summer and vacation schools. In-charge of the Institute with Bishop O'Hern were Rev. Walter A. Farley, of the board of directors of the Council of Social Agencies, Rev. Patrick A. Moffat, pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Sorrows, and Rev. Joseph D'Jesi, assistant pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel.
