Mr. Meyers was well respected in the community, and his death is sincerely regretted.

STAIRS OF SAND

Sara flew across and took her grandmother in her arms and pressed her tear stained face against hers. The tears were of joy, however.

"The honk of an auto sounded outside. 'I'm going to buy the house. You go tell Aunt Emmy to bring over a couple of good colored women to help us pack and move. Wash could help too, if he wasn't too lazy.'"

Sara went with her grandmother to the car and helped her in, hoping she would be asked to go along. There was no word said, however. Her grandmother rode away sitting very erect on the back seat.

Sara circled about and went around the barns and house. The barns were part log and part frame, the log portion being the original home of her great grandfather Leavitt. The territory around at that time was not very thickly settled; perhaps a house every mile or so, with large areas of corn and wheat land and fields that at odd seasons had been sown to timothy and clover. The frame portion of the barn was now rumpstepped, with loose boards, through which the wind moaned at times, and which several over-shadowing elms and a butternut tree made picturesque as well as pathetic.

Finally Sara went inside. She hoped her grandmother wouldn't insist on moving much to the new house. It was all so old and reminiscent of an earlier day. The old fashioned four-poster bed in her father's room, with its deep curving incisions was a sadly worn out descendant of an early Jacobean ancestor. The bureau of cherry was high and wide and solidly built. Sara felt sure Carol would dispose of these advantageously. The rag carpet that underlay all these sturdy examples of enduring furniture was a weak, faded, lead and pink colored affair which had been woven by a great-grandmother, on the now creaky, wooden loom standing like a dusty, bony skeleton in the attic.

Sara wondered if she would be able to coax grandmother to furnish the new home in a pretty, modern way.

When Lois came up the following morning she found everything in confusion. Doors and windows were wide open, clothes and bedding were in process of airing and upstairs Sara was turning the closets inside out.

"It won't take you long to move at this rate," said Lois. "There isn't much of the stuff here worth moving, I say."

"Can we make her see that?" Sara asked. "We'll have to handle her right," urged Lois. "Let her think at first we'll leave it all to her and gradually inject our own ideas."

Lois stayed to help with the packing and telephoned Billy to come out for supper. Thus the last evening in the old home passed more cheerfully than Sara had dared to hope.

Following an old habit she went to a window and dropped to the floor with her arms on the sill. She wondered if she was the same person who had sat at that place through so many nights of torture. Sighing over her first love and later over dear, complacent Neil Cramer, worrying endlessly over money matters, agonizing over Nat's delinquencies. It was all over and in a few days she was going out to search for her own particular adventure. She stood up and stretched her arms, smiling out into the night. Never had she felt so superbly strong, so confident, so utterly ready for whatever life had in store for her.

Bishop Walsh of Newark Officiates at Consecration Of Cemetery at Watkins Glen Impressive Service Sunday Afternoon is Attended by Many Priests and People—Former Pastor Helped Bishop Walsh Become a Priest.

Watkins Glen, Sept. 4.—The beautiful cemetery of St. Mary's of the Lake was consecrated here Sunday afternoon by the Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Walsh, D. D., Bishop of Newark, N. J., who was granted jurisdiction by the Rt. Rev. John Francis O'Hern, D. D., Bishop of Rochester. A large number of priests and several hundred people attended the ceremony. Bishop Walsh came here upon invitation of Mrs. Elizabeth Barrett, Rotaschild of Orange, N. J., sister of the late Rt. Rev. J. Edgar Thomas Barrett, the only priest who is buried in the local cemetery. Mrs. Rotaschild was present at the service Sunday.

Assisting Bishop Walsh in the ceremony were: The Rev. Thomas Carroll of the St. Mary's Church, Watkins Glen; the Rev. James Griffin, St. Mary's Church, Corning; the Rev. Arthur Lemay, chaplain of the National Soldiers' Home at Bath; the Rev. J. Esser of St. James Church, Trumansburg; the Rev. Augustus F. Temmerman of St. Vincent's Church, Corning; the Rev. Patrick Kelly of Hammondport; the Rev. St. H. H. H. of St. Mary's Church, Horseheads. Choir and altar boys from St. Mary's Church also assisted.

Ceremony Near Mausoleum The cemetery, high above Lake Seneca, made a beautiful setting for the services which were conducted near a crucifix erected and donated by the late Monsignor Thomas Barrett, a short distance from a mausoleum, where his body reposes. This was erected by his sister, Mrs. Rotaschild. The Rev. Thomas Carroll, pastor of St. Mary's Church, spoke appreciatively of the presence of Bishop Walsh at the service and thanked him for coming. He said Bishop Walsh was at the head of a great Diocese, a Diocese that had 1,499 square miles of territory, 720 priests and 750,000 Catholic people. Father Groden, of Horseheads recited the rosary for the dead, and a procession of priests and people moved to five different points in the cemetery.

Bishop Walsh speaks Following the closing of the cemetery, Bishop Walsh spoke eloquently and appropriately. He said in part: "You have been witnesses of the solemn consecration of this cemetery, blessed and sanctified to receive the sanctified body of God's people—'Resting Place'—'My Round'." Bishop Walsh referred to a former pastor of St. Mary's, the Rev. Henry M. Lettice, whom he called the instrument of God who helped him attain the priesthood; likewise the Rt. Rev. Alton Barrett. "After resigning over this parish, he came to Wellsville, where he helped me in the priesthood," he said. "I am very glad to celebrate Mass on that same altar of Father Lettice with you this Sunday and last. This cemetery is a sacred place, and we should come here often."

A Loved Pioneer The late Monsignor and Mrs. Rotaschild are descendants of James Barrett, who was the first Catholic to settle in this region. Monsignor Barrett was a personal friend of Bishop Walsh. He was an illustrious son of St. Mary's parish and served parishes at East Pembroke, Salamanca, Belfast, Belmont and Buffalo. He retired two years ago and maintained a private chapel, St. Stephen's in New Jersey. On his death, this chapel descended into the hands of his sister, Mrs. Rotaschild. It is one of the few private chapels in the United States.

Sergeant Charles Roche and Trooper Edward Maloney of the Horseheads Barracks and Trooper J. Boenger of the Watkins Glen outpost directed traffic and the packing of automobiles. He who is resolved to undertake great things, and to courageously endure all the difficulties he encounters, will soon weaken the strength of the devil.

WATERLOO

FINNERTY—MARSHALL

Waterloo, Sept. 4.—One of the prettiest weddings of the season took place in St. Mary's Church here on Wednesday morning last week, when Miss Dorothy Clare Marshall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Marshall of 33 Stark Street, and John Joseph Finnerty, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Finnerty of Geneva, were married by the Rev. George McCall, pastor, who also celebrated the nuptial Mass.

The bride was attended by Mrs. Eugene Walsh of Geneva, sister of the groom, as matron of honor, and by Miss Mary Henry, a cousin, of Waterloo, as bridesmaid. Eugene Walsh of Geneva was best man. Ushers were George Finnerty of Geneva, Vincent Spozzow of Canandaigua, Louis Neston of Waterloo and Joseph Marshall of Waterloo. The bride and groom are well known, and their many friends will unite in wishing them a happy married life.

Dick Donoghue, Auburn Football Star, Coach Now

Auburn, Sept. 4.—Dick Donoghue of it is city, for three years a tackle at Notre Dame under the late Coach Knute Rockne, has received his appointment as the coach at the University of Alabama. While at Notre Dame he played in two national championship football games. He is more than six feet tall, of powerful build, and he has had splendid training in football. His friends look for excellent results from his work with Alabama, which has one of the best teams in America.

Dick isn't the only football star in his family. His brother, Bernard, J., will be out for quarterback on the Georgetown University team next fall. He is transferring from Notre Dame, where for two years he played halfback under Rockne.

The Donoghue boys are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Donoghue, No. 277 Seventh Avenue. They were graduated from Auburn High School, where they played on the grid team.

SENECA FALLS

MRS. ELLIEN LENCH Seneca Falls, Sept. 4.—Mrs. Ellen Lynch, aged 76, widow of James Lynch, died Monday at her home, 57 East Bayard Street. She leaves four sons, Matthew of Seneca Falls, Joseph of Hornell, James of Buffalo and Edward of New York, and eight grandchildren. Her funeral was held Thursday morning in St. Patrick's Church, and it was attended by many friends.

The greater the love, the greater the sorrow; hence the more ardent St. Mary's Magdalen's love for Jesus, the more keen was her sorrow at the recollection of the great offenses she had committed against God from whom she had received so many graces.

ELMIRA

NOVACK—HOWLAND Elmira, Sept. 4.—A pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Patrick's Church Thursday evening last week when Miss Gretchen M. Howland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Novack, 6 Gates Place, became the bride of Frank Novack of 422 Railroad Avenue. The Rev. Father McCloskey of Bentley Creek performed the ceremony. The church was beautifully decorated with pink and white. Mrs. Charles Lynch, organist, furnished a program of wedding music. The bride was crowned in powder blue chiffon with matching French hornshair hat and slipper, and bouquet and mitts. She carried an arm bouquet of yellow roses.

Miss Gretchen A. Howland, the sister's attendant, wore a dress of rose-chiffon, corresponding French hornshair hat and slipper, and French hornshair mitts. Her bouquet was composed of gladioli. Bernard Carroll of Ridgebury, Pa., was best man. A wedding breakfast was served at The Mark Twain, after which the newlyweds left for New York to spend their honeymoon. They will be home to their friends after Sept. 15 at 104 East Henry Street.

NEWMAN—MORAN Elmira, Sept. 4.—Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Elizabeth M. Newman of 801 Highland St. E. and Edward J. Moran, Jr. of Elmira. The ceremony took place in St. Mary's Church, Port Richmond, Aug. 22. Mr. Moran is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Moran of 517 Broadway, this city.
