Dives With Her Babies
The grebe is a tiny bird endowed with a wonderful amount of cunning. She hides her nest in a manner that makes it impossible for any human to discover, but it is when the five tiny young appear that the parents bring out their cunning. You will seldom see them, although the babies are able to swim and dive short distances a few hours after they leave their shells. If there is the slightest sign of danger, the mother gives the alarm cry, and instantly the diminutive birds scuttle across the water to her. She lifts both wings, and all five scramble underneath. Then she brings her wings to her side, with her family safely hidden underneath, dives with them, and carries them under water to a place of safety.

Catch Fish by Whistling
Natives of some sections of India have several unusual methods of catching fish, including luring them by whistling, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. In Assam, fishermen crouch on the banks of shallow lakes and emit a shrill whistle which attracts a species of mountain fish. Lured by the sound, this fish darts into the open palms of the whistler and is caught. In other places the direct rays of the sun force mountain fish to seek shelter beneath or beside rocks along the banks of streams. The cunning hillman crouis to a boulder behind which a fish is hiding, strikes the rock a heavy blow with his steel-shod club, and catches the fish, stunned by the sound vibrations.

"Hobo" and "Yegg"
The word "hobo," meaning a shiftless worker— itinerant laborer—a tramp (as distinguished from "yegg") originated in the United States. "The tramp's name for himself and his fellows is hobo, plural hoboes," says J. Flynn in the Contemporary Review for August, 1931. "Yegg" or "yeggman" is a tramp who makes a business of robbing rather than of begging; a traveling burglar and safe-blower. "When a particularly clever thief," says the Philadelphia Press of May 27, 1900, "is found among a gipsy tribe he is selected as the yegg or chief thief. Then came the name of John Yegg and finally the word yeggman."

Investment Planning
An investment trust is an organization which, with its capital, buys a variety of stocks and bonds. The dividends received on these are pooled and constitute the earning of the trust. If a corporation, dividends are paid on the stock in accordance with the amounts earned on the securities held. The purpose is to spread investments over a wide field so that if one investment goes bad it will be balanced by another which will pay. The owner of stock in the investment trust thus gets the benefit of the wide spread over a great many risks.—Washington Star.

Many a Man Today Has a Lapsed Income

That's Only Temporary—As In the Mountains

Washed clothes, he wants as fine clothes as he is accustomed to, and this is to say, the National has exactly that for you. A price in keeping with income that may not be as large. This is a store known for its value—value for more than thirty years. Changing conditions can't change its record with us that!
