Seminaries and Colleges Statistics of Attendance for Year 1930

The National Catholic Welfare Conference takes a keen interest in all educational matters, and particularly in Catholic education. The National Council of Catholic Men is sponsored with this Conference. The Conference issues a monthly Bulletin that is filled with matters of great interest to all members of the Council. The August Bulletin was devoted largely to educational matters. One article, written by James E. Cummings, gave statistics of attendance at Seminaries and Colleges in 1930. These were gathered by the Department of Education of the Conference, and are based on returns from 80 dioceses in America. A previous report gave the elementary Catholic school attendance as 2,216,000 pupils. Seminary and College reports follow:

Seminary Statistics
The data compiled for seminaries are as follows:
A total of 18,906 students was enrolled in the major and preparatory seminaries of the United States in the school year ended in June, 1930. This figure represents an increase of more than 1,500 students as compared with the total enrollment of the same institutions in 1928, the last year surveyed by the department.
By the term "major seminary" the survey indicates those institutions in which the study of philosophy and theology is pursued and which are of collegiate rank. In 1930, there were 98 major seminaries; in 1928, there were 98 major seminaries; in 1928, there were 94 major seminaries. Fifty-eight of these were devoted exclusively to the training of candidates of the various religious orders, 26 to the training of secular priests, and 12 to the training of students for both fields of religious work. In 1928, there were 94 major seminaries. Fifty-eight of these were devoted exclusively to the training of candidates of religious orders, 24 for the training of secular priests, and 12 trained both secular and religious priests.

The Registrations
The 98 major seminaries covered in the 1930 survey were staffed by a total of 869 instructors, including 636 religious, 216 secular and 11 lay instructors, while the total number of students was 7,631, of whom 2,959 were studying for religious orders and 4,674 for the secular priesthood. In 1928, the 94 major seminaries covered in the survey were staffed by 798 instructors, including 538 religious, 249 secular and 11 lay instructors, while the total enrollment was 6,856, of whom 2,869 were students training for religious orders and 3,986 were studying for the secular priesthood.

The total number of ordinations reported by the 98 major seminaries in 1930 was 902.
The 1930 survey covers 90 preparatory seminaries, 54 of which are devoted to training candidates for the religious orders only, while 26 are devoted to the training of secular clerical, and 10 to the training of candidates for both the religious and secular clergy. A total of 93 preparatory seminaries reported in the 1928 survey. Of these 54 were voted to the training of candidates for the secular clergy, and 11 to training candidates for both the religious and secular clergy.

Preparatory Seminaries
The 90 preparatory seminaries covered in the 1930 survey were staffed by 1,089 instructors, and were attended by 11,273 students. The preparatory seminaries covered in the 1928 survey were staffed by 1,027 instructors and were attended by 10,482 students.

The 90 preparatory seminaries in the 1930 survey graduated 1,453 students, of whom 940 entered major seminaries. In 1928, the preparatory seminaries reported 1,078 graduates, of whom 795 entered major seminaries.

College Returns
The survey shows that a total of 104,023 students were enrolled in 164 Catholic colleges and universities of this country for the school year which ended in June, 1930. Compared with the total of 87,031 students reported in the school year which ended in June, 1928, the last previous survey, the 1930 figures represent an increase of 18,992 students, or 19.5 per cent. The total of 79,331 students reported in 73 Catholic men's colleges in 1930 is an increase of 11,281 students, or 16.6 per cent, over the 1928 enrollment. The 24,892 students reported in 31 women's colleges in 1930 represent an increase of 5,711 students, or 30.1 per cent over 1928.

The increased enrollment reported for the two-year period 1928-30 is held by authorities to represent a normal, healthy progress in Catholic institutions of higher learning, marked principally by rapid growth in several of the large universities and in a number of the colleges for women. The widespread interest in Catholic education may also be seen, it is said, in the increasing number of students taking summer and extension courses.

In Big Figures
The 104,023 students attending Catholic institutions of higher learning in 1930 included:—Summer sessions, 12,752; extension courses and Saturday classes for teachers, 6,407; correspondence courses, 1,036. When the returns from these courses are subtracted from the number of students in college and university courses is 76,832.
The total number of professors and instructors reported in the colleges and universities in 1930 was 7,255. Of these, 3,095 were religious, 3,850 were laymen and laywomen, and 580 were unclassified. Lay teachers, then, comprised 51.2 per cent of the total number of teachers, religious teachers, 41.1 per cent, and the unclassified group, 7.7 per cent.
Between 1928 and 1930 the increase in the total number of instructors and professors was 696, or 10.2 per cent.

Over $400,000 Spent in Boston In Charity Work

Boston, Oct. 8.—More than $400,000 was expended in the last year for the relief of the poor in the Archdiocese, under the direction of His Eminence William Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston, according to figures just published by The Pilot, official organ of the archdiocese.
The $400,000 figure, according to the Pilot includes only the amount expended for relief and excludes expenditures for the board of children. The paper states that the St. Vincent de Paul Society alone spent $250,000 in the past 12 months.

"So Long, Until To-morrow"

By JOHN A. TWAMLEY
(with apologies to Lowell Thomas)
While on this earth, good friend with friend
And at the parting words are said,
With tears eyes will be smarting,
And when the time for parting comes
It would lessen much the sorrow
Were we to use these simple words:
"So Long, until to-morrow."
The words "Good-bye," are sad, indeed,
They cause eyes to be tearful,
The word "Farewell," is also sad,
At least, it is not cheerful;
Such words as these oft cause a sigh,
And fill fond hearts with sorrow,
So, it is better far, to say—
"So Long, until to-morrow."
Yes, while we're going down life's way,
Our good friends oft must leave us,
And the words said at the parting may
Pain them, and also grieve us;
So, at such times, let's choose our words,
In hopes to lessen sorrow,
It would be very difficult to submit to our superiors for the sake of God, nor to deprive ourselves of any comfort through obedience.
But there is a land of peace and joy,
Where hearts are never broken,
Where sad good-byes and fond farewells
Are never, never, spoken,
There, tearful eyes are never seen,
For there, there is no sorrow,
In Heaven we will, never say:
"So Long, until to-morrow."

Aquinas Sports

By WILFRID MARTIN

This year marks the inauguration of football as a recognized sport at the Aquinas Institute. This school authorities, after careful consideration, have decided to give this popular sport a three-year trial at the Institute.
Though this is the first year Aquinas has had a football schedule, football was played at the school last year in a small way in order to give the new sport a chance. John Sullivan, who was a star back at the University of Rochester, was secured as coach and together with Mori Leary formed a team from the squad of raw recruits, some of whom had never before played football. Aquinas played but one game last season, losing to Albion, 13-7.

Three weeks ago Head Coach Johnny Sullivan lauded the first call for football candidates and was answered by the turning out of nearly 200 young men full of an ambitious desire to play football. This squad has been put through two hours of strenuous fundamental training daily. Tackling, blocking, punting, passing and receiving were practiced. The squad, now reduced to 40 men, will be put through a week long scrimmaging the first of the season and will be in the pre-season campaign. The boys looked a little ragged at times, but considering it was their first attempt the two coaches were well pleased. All credit is due to Coach Sullivan for his astute in preparation for their game with Fairport High School, October 10.

The Irish have several veterans from last year and are not lacking in material. The backfield has three regulars from last year, Marks, Nally and Leary. Marks has just returned to school to play football. He is a triple threat man of the Irish this year, being a fine and accurate passer, a long punter and a good receiver. Leary is a huge fullback, whose chief asset is a set of drive which he uses to good advantage in his line backs. Nally, a diminutive quarterback, is the peppy Irish field general. The line is the chief concern of Coach Sullivan and though he has more beef in it this year, it lacks in experience.

The squad is divided into four teams and though none of the positions are definite the tentative first and second lineups are as follows: First team, backfield, Leary, Nally, Marks, Connelly and Sullivan; line, Messinger, Tamm, Ingels, Van Alst, Green, Finocchiaro, Fink and Ruser; second team, backfield, Wall, Farrell, Aulenbacher, Shiller, Haumen, Pappert, McKee, Mira, McMahon, Schmidt, Schrieber and Bonberg.

October 10—Fairport High School at Edgerton Park. October 17—Genesee High School at Edgerton Park. October 24—Webster High School at Edgerton Park. October 31—U. of R. Freshmen at River Campus. November 7—Waterloo High School at Edgerton Park. November 14—Albion High School at Edgerton Park.

If we reflect that the Son of God left the bosom of His Father through obedience, to serve us, we shall not find it very difficult to submit to our superiors for the sake of God, nor to deprive ourselves of any comfort through obedience.
