Italian Skipper, Born in Ireland, Plans Trip Home

New York, Nov. 20.—Captain Aristotle Cosulich, grandson of the founder of the Cosulich steamship line and commander of the Cosulich liner Vulcania, will sacrifice his regular vacation next summer to command the liner Saturnia when she sails on June 9 with a party to the thirty-first World's Eucharistic Congress, in Dublin. His principal incentive is the desire to revisit the land of his birth for the first time in more than fifty years.

The uncertainties that mark the life of men of the sea make this son of an old Italian family a native-born Irishman. His father, Captain Fausto Cosulich, in command of the Italian bark Tigre, and his mother were completing a trip around the world in July, 1874, and the ship had just dropped anchor in the port of Dublin when the boy was born. When the Tigre left Dublin several weeks later the Irish-born Cosulich baby was aboard.

Church Plating Of High Quality Skillfully Done

A number of priests have been victimized recently in the Diocese of Rochester by dishonest and irresponsible persons who have been soliciting the work of plating church vessels. The best way to avoid any trouble of this kind is to deal with a dependable firm. The firm of Stuart, Oliver, Holt Co. has been in business in Rochester nearly 20 years. It has no agents calling from door to door, but a letter or phone call will bring a member of the firm to any rectory in any part of the Diocese. This firm makes new chalices, candelabra or any church vessel, and it does all kinds of plating. Its work is guaranteed and its prices are most reasonable. A trial order will be appreciated.

To An Absent Friend

To you, today, dear friend of mine, I'll pen a line or two, To say I hope your health is fine, And that your skies are blue. We were together many years, And I was happy then, And I know well I would dry my tears, To see your smile again. May happiness be yours, dear friend, As on thru life you go, And I hope that when you reach Ketler's and Bright heaven's bliss you'll know, And if no more while here below, Dear friend, we chance to meet, May we sometime together go, Along bright heaven's street. These bitter partings are no more, Nor do friends say farewell, So, when our lives on earth are o'er, May we in that home dwell. —John A. Twamley
