Minister Faces Murder Charge After Dry Raid

Palatka, Fla., Jan. 8.—A coroner's jury investigation has resulted in a charge of first degree murder against the Rev. Earl H. McGaha, a Palatka minister, in the Christmas Eve slaying of John W. Malone in a liquor still raid.

The coroner's jury closed its investigation with a report that Malone was shot to death from shotgun wounds fired from a still in the hands of E. H. McGaha.

The minister held in jail, since the slaying, immediately was placed under the murder charge. He had accompanied Putnam County officers on the raid after he was reported to have discovered the still. He said his gun was accidentally discharged when he tripped on an underbrush as the raiding party closed in on the still.

Father Downey To Be Speaker; Catholic Club

Former Dean of Holy Cross College Will Talk at January Supper Meeting, Open to Men and Women.

The Rev. Francis X. Downey, S. J., former dean of Holy Cross College at Worcester, Mass., will be the guest of the Catholic Women's Club at its January supper on Monday evening, January 11th, in the Columbus Hall Room. The supper is open to men and women.

A distinguished Greek scholar and writer, Father Downey is prominent in educational circles. In 1926 he produced and directed the Greek play "Hecuba" in Worcester, which due to its unprecedented success, was later produced at the Sesqui Centennial in Philadelphia. The subject of his talk before the club will be "Paris and Paucos—a Talk for Moderns."

Included in the list of hostesses for the supper are the wives and mothers of a number of Holy Cross Alumni. Miss Lucy R. Sheridan is general chairman, and she is being assisted by Miss Alice F. Kirk, Mrs. Eugene J. Downey, Mrs. John F. Ryan, Mrs. Mrs. Thomas H. Green, Mrs. Thomas J. Brennan, Mrs. John P. Williams, Mrs. John Connor, Mrs. William L. Waldert, Mrs. George Green, Mrs. Edward J. Rooney, Mrs. Edward J. Lucas, Miss Esther Trant, Mrs. Edward J. Reynolds, Mrs. Frank S. Göttery, Mrs. A. B. Herbert, Mrs. Timothy Keenan, Mrs. Charles F. Ward, Miss Marie Rice, Mrs. Harvey P. Rockwell, Mrs. Leo F. Simpson, Mrs. Edward E. Bennett, Mrs. Philip Donnelly, Miss Cecilia M. Yawman, Mrs. Anna Kinsion, Miss Mary Louise Galtman, Mrs. George W. Querino, Mrs. Louis A. Whelan, Mrs. Irving Rickard, Mrs. Joseph E. Marelle, Mrs. William Blackwood, Mrs. John G. Magin, Mrs. J. G. Hickey, Mrs. Conrad P. Ward, Miss Rosemary White, Mrs. J. G. Menihan, Mrs. Anthony J. Ryan, Mrs. Emily O'Donnell.

Tickets are in the hands of the committee and are on sale at the Club House. Reservations for the supper must be made at the Club House no later than Saturday noon in the balcony of the Hall Room with a nominal sum for those desiring to hear the lecture without attending the supper.

St. Patrick's Cathedral Radio Hour

"My," I said to Tom, "how this early morning air refreshes one. No sleep now, I am all eyes."

"Try it often, Tom, it's good for you. You win the first smile today," Tom said, as we entered his car.

"Give the old vintage the gas, a good filling to get you can't afford to miss the life today. I know what a grand razzing would be awaiting me if I should return."

"What do you mean, that you would be unwelcome?" asked Tom.

"Oh, no, Tom, don't get touchy so early," I said. "Of course not, for there was ever a place in which I have experienced real comfort and congeniality, it is in your home and with your people."

"How fortunate we are, Tom, to make such good connection with this early ferry," I said, running like a machine. However, I felt a sort of panicky feeling every now and then when I took at the auto wheel. The dash there, what's new—5-15? Of course plenty of time, we will be at the Newark airport by 5:30. Newark is tucked away safely as yet beneath those good autumn blankets.

"Father, do you see the reflection of the port lights in the distance?" said Tom. "It's those third class cars welcome them as harborers of safety."

"Yes, Tom, I said, "I'm making that as those boys are winging their way around a 100 or more miles an hour, when they peer through those wind-swept shields, even though they appear like flashes of lightning in the distance, they can label those lights Newark."

Quite a different sight greeted our eyes at the port than did as we passed through Newark. It was as bright as day. "All was activity in the motor of our car," I said, as I looked at the motor. It was the birth of another. From a short distance away one could pick up the droning of the propeller of the worthy ship of the skies which would carry me back safely I hoped, to dear old Rochester—Rochester of the banks of the Genesee.

To the left, the air—your ticket please gentlemen; "Just leave your baggage there—your chair is number 1 on the right."

A Trip in a Plane

"Good-bye, Tom, thank you for me, Numberless are the proofs of your kindness. I hope that I have not inconvenienced you, but before I finish the sentence, I have pressed my hand and said good-bye, but could say no more, as his voice was drowned by the spinning of the propeller, as it churned up a young cyclone.

"It was exactly 5 a. m., as the door into the spacious cabin was hatched open, the engine given the start, the pilot pulling the stick as we reached the end of the runway, and suddenly the earth seemed to fade away until the airport appeared a little incandescent bulb, as we circled once at a fair altitude and then pointed due north west over New Jersey.

"To tell the truth, this happened so quickly that I had had no time to take a survey of the interior of the comfortable cabin in which some fifteen other passengers were seated scanning the strange view below.

Dawn was breaking in the east, but I made scarcely a glance at the dawn, which still held a mantle over mother earth. If it had not been for the flicker of a light here and there, one would have sworn that we were stationary and suspended in air-like the stars in the heaven above.

"It was my first trip home by air. The thrill of a rocket in the air engaged me for a time and then wore away. Thought of danger never entered my mind. The sweet purring of the motors dispelled the robin at once. I mused with my own feelings for quite a time. I even wondered like the sea-god on the first voyage whether or not I would experience air-nausea. But if it was there, it was soon relieved by a gentleman leaning over my shoulder with the remark:

"I should imagine from your tension which you have assumed in that comfortable chair, that this is your first aerial voyage?"

"Yes, you are right," I said, "made up my mind in a hurry yesterday morning, bade my friends good-bye last night, rushed to the port this morning, hastily settled in my chair before the earth left me. Here you find me."

"I should imagine from your demeanor," he said, "that your packed-up fear has not left you entirely. Relax—there is no danger. We have a skilled pilot, a good plane, clean fresh air, and so your day will be soon breaking; an excellent breakfast will be served—" by the way, I wonder what that brilliant spot is ahead; look quick or else we will have passed it."

Villanova College

Even from the air I recognized Villanova College. I said to him, "that is one of our Catholic institutions conducted by the Augustinian Fathers." It is a high-rated school where young men take the "science-aria courses," also has an excellent engineering curriculum. Notice that particularly bright spot—that is the Chapel connected with the outfit."

"Oh! pardon me; I did not recognize you as a Catholic priest," I introduced myself so informally,

Former Madonna At Oberammergau Kitchen Maid Now

London, Jan. 8.—A few months ago the Madonna in Oberammergau's famous Passion Play today kitchen helper in a home in a Sussex village. That is the remarkable transition effected by Ann Rutz, who last year, was autographing books for admirers at the rate of 2,000 a day.

Conditions are very bad in Germany, and when the Passion Play was over a friend, an Oberammergau girl who was already a domestic servant in England, wrote and asked Anna to come over.

Anna has a mother and two sisters at home. Their house is their only means of support, and thus this courageous girl, forgetting what she was a year ago, went out to get any honest job to sustain the family. She is hoping to find jobs for her two sisters, Mia and Gretchen.

Fine New Radios Are On Display At Uebelacker's

This is the time to buy, right after the holiday season, and of the best things to buy is a radio. It is no other time of the year is so much attention paid to the programs of music and entertainment offered nightly by the orchestras and other amusement concerns.

A good radio is a joy forever, but a radio which works badly or hasn't the power to reach out and get the best of the many good programs available, is something else again.

Uebelacker Brothers of 340 Jefferson Avenue are experts in radio repairing, as well as widely known dealers in new machines. They have a large stock of Lyric, Zenith and Stewart-Warner radios, with of course the accessories that are needed to make any repairs which may be necessary.

"The tone and the tuning-in power of our radio sets," says Uebelacker, "are what we place most emphasis on." He says that Uebelacker, manager of the store, recently, "The Stewart-Warner set, for example, will bring in programs from far and wide and does it so easily, because of its great power, that static is kept from the reception. Some machines will bring in the programs—but at the same time they sound out with static so that the programs are almost undecipherable. That of course, provides little real radio enjoyment."

Have an ardent desire for your satisfaction and a great confidence in Jesus and Mary,
