Bishop O'Hern Recommends Summer Camps

In Pastoral Letter Urges Consideration by Parents of Madonna and Stella Maris Camps

A strong recommendation by Most Rev. John Francis O'Hern, D.D., for the two Catholic camps, one for boys and one for girls in the diocese is contained in a letter sent to the pastors of the diocese for announcement this coming Sunday. In the letter, Bishop O'Hern states:

"Dear Reverend Father, 'Now that the parochial schools are about to close for the summer, parents of our Catholic boys and girls are planning vacations for their children. We urge you at this time to encourage your parishioners who are thinking of a camp for their children to send them to a Catholic camp where they will be surrounded by the proper safeguards to their faith.

"We highly recommend Camp Madonna on Canandaigua Lake, conducted by the Catholic Women's Club, for girls ten to sixteen years of age, and Camp Stella Maris on Oneida Lake, the Rochester Diocesan Camp for boys eight to sixteen years of age.

Camp Madonna will open on Saturday, July 2.

Camp Stella Maris will open on Sunday afternoon, July 3.

"Any assistance you may give the camps by your recommendation and by an announcement from your pulpit on Sunday, June 26, will be greatly appreciated.

Devotedly yours to Christ,

JOHN FRANCIS O'HERN,

BISHOP OF ROCHESTER."

Retreat President

Retreat At St. Bernard's Is Underway

About 200 Catholic laymen of the diocese will take their over-night bags and report at St. Bernard's Seminary, this evening, at 6 P. M., to be present for the opening supper of the annual laymen's retreat. The retreat will be in charge of the Rev. Joseph T. Boyle, C.S.C., of St. Paul, Minn.

That this movement has the approval of His Excellency, Bishop O'Hern, may be realized from the following statement issued by him:

"I am glad to add my word of approval to that of other members of the hierarchy in commending the movement in the highest possible manner. Here in the Diocese of Rochester the laymen's retreat movement has been sponsored for several years with a constant growth in numbers and with a genuine spirit of appreciation expressed by the retreatants at the close of the exercises.

"It is a diocesan-wide movement which has been organized and developed almost entirely by the men themselves. Out of it has grown the confraternity known as 'The Nocturnal Adoration Society,' which has been canonically established in the Cathedral parish and is now flourishing. Thus, the spirit of the annual retreat is carried over and distributed throughout the entire year through 'his beautiful devotion to Our Lord in the Blessed Sacrament once a month by means of the Nocturnal Adoration group, a great many of whom are the regular laymen retreatants.

"I hasten to subscribe myself a firm believer in, and ardent advocate of, the laymen's retreat movement which has taken such a firm hold in the American Church."

Though it is said that the origin of the laymen's retreat movement is difficult to determine, historians link it up with the great modern movement which dates from 1832 when the Jesuit Pere Henry began promoting retreats for workmen in France. It is traced back to the times of St. Ignatius and even before that to the reformation monks and hermits in the desert in the early Christian period and before that to the first Christian retreat of Christ Himself in the desert of Judea.

U. S. Catholic Physicians Guilds Denounce Birth Control Practices

New York.—The first annual meeting of the directors of the Federation of Catholic Physicians' Guilds of the United States was held at the Catholic Club, New York, June 10. The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

"The federation declares that the objective of medicine is the promotion and conservation of human life, not its prevention nor destruction. It consequently deplores certain trends in the practice of medicine which are a menace to the high standing of the profession.

"The federation declares that contraceptive birth control is not only contrary to the plain dictates of reason, hence the natural moral law; but that the active propaganda of contraception is a serious blow to the purity and integrity of American youth, a menace to the family, and an increasing threat to the vitality of America's national life and ideals.

"The federation records with gratitude the action of the religious groups which have been fearless in their denunciation of contraception, as an action preservative of the moral standards of American life, individual, family and social.

"The federation expresses its satisfaction at the overwhelming rejection by a committee of the House of Representatives of a bill to legalize the dissemination of contraceptive information through the mails. This rejection was an act preservative of the vital interests of the American people.

"The federation reaffirms its dedication to the promotion of moral principles in medical education and practice. It emphasizes the growing

Birth Control Results From Bad Housing

London.—Bad housing and unfair landlords were blamed by the Most Rev. William Pitt-Rivers, Auxiliary Bishop of Southwark, for birth restriction among the poor when he spoke at an international conference here under the auspices of the League of Nations.

Bishop Brown said that all efforts toward settling the problem would be fruitless if people remained under the threat of being turned out of their houses if they have another child.

"A working class mother, struggling to bring up her children in a small house, has no defense," said Bishop, "against the landlord who informs her that if she has another child she must leave or send away one of the older children. A bigger boy or girl must be sent to grandparents—or anywhere—in order to keep the family down to 'proper limits'."

The Bishop declared that family life is "almost impossible" in houses now being erected in sections that are being developed around London, owing to the size of the houses and to rooms which lack air.

Souvenirs at each table were a bottle of wine and a green Irish shillelagh. Bouquets and palms, a long speakers' table was located along the east wall of the ballroom.
