Nun, Nurse in Civil War, Dies Here

(Continued from Page One) Vick, Devery, Paul Lambert, Zoe St. Maurice, John Hasselt and Arthur Taylor. A long span of years, the principal part of which were devoted to arduous nursing, was terminated with the death of Sister Mariano at the age of 89 years.

Born in Limerick, Ireland, Dec. 5, 1843, Mary Elizabeth Carney, sister to the late Sister Mariano, came to the United States when she was two years old. On Sept. 8, 1860, at the age of 17 years, having decided to enter the Sisters of Charity, she was received into the Order at her mother's house at Emmittsburg, Maryland.

For nearly seven years Sister Carney was employed as a nurse in the Civil War, and she was called upon to nurse the wounded at Annapolis Hospital, Washington, D. C. She has occupied important positions in the United States having served at St. Mary's Hospital, Mt. Airy, N. C.; St. John's Hospital, Lowell, Mass.; and at New Orleans and Chicago. During the Spanish-American war, duty took her to Montauk Point, where she nursed the soldiers of that conflict.

For twenty years she has been on the retired list at St. Mary's Hospital, Rochester, and was the last of the Civil War nurses at that hospital. She possessed exceptional executive ability and during her years here as a superior from 1900 to 1929, she presided over the staff at the hospital, raised the standard of the training school which she founded, and improved the system of keeping the records. Up to shortly before her death she had always been a good hearted and always observed the rule of the order arising at 4 A. M. and retiring at around midnight to retire the way of late years accustomed to all the fine sewing on the white collars worn by members of the community. She attended Mass and received Holy Communion in the hospital chapel Thursday morning of last week.

Summer School Pays Tribute To Father Duffy

Following the dinner a band concert was provided by the Infantry Band from Plattsburgh Barracks. The Independence Day oration was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Curran. Fr. Roach acted as chairman, and greetings from Plattsburgh were extended by the Hon. F. J. Tierney.

The morning course of lectures was given by the Rev. John J. Finn, S.T.L., of Chatham, N. Y. In his opening lecture of the series dealing with "Recent Tendencies in Psychology," Father Finn paid tribute to the late Dr. Duffy, and said that he was a psychologist of a practical bent, keen in his knowledge of human nature.

In his lecture Father Finn considered the practical side of psychology, its application to every day life, to industry, advertising, and propaganda. He considered the emphasis placed on biology in recent psychology, noting the change from the metaphysical point of view. He considered also the sub-conscious mind, stating that it is not a new conception, and considering its scope. He considered further, in this relation, Christian Science, Couéism, New Thought and Hypnotism. In regard to psychanalysis and behaviorism, and historical psychology, the social mindedness of the present age, and the relation of psychology to biography, were considered by the lecturer.

The evening course of four piano lectures was given by Agnes Clune Quinlan. She considered in her respective programs, Wagner and His Works, The Lure of Melody, The Significance of the Dance in Music, and the Contributions of Russia, Poland and Norway. In each program Miss Quinlan illustrated her remarks with selections from representative composers. The informality of the lecturer added to the interest manifested both in the subjects and the lecturer herself.

Among the expressions of sympathy in the death of the Rev. Francis J. Duffy, D.D., president of the Summer school, were those received from William J. Carey, president of the Rochester Cottage Association, and from Miss Ignatia Moreland, hostess of the Rochester Cottage.

From the Southland has come word that the Rev. Thomas J. Knox, a native of Savannah and since his ordination several years ago, an assistant at the Cathedral of St. John the Baptist in Savannah, has been commissioned a chaplain by the Navy Department with the rank of lieutenant, junior grade. He will be assigned to the Marine Barracks at Quantico, Va. This information comes from the Catholic Laymen's League, Bulletin of which Richard Reid is editor. Father Knox is a graduate of St. Bernard's Seminary and was ordained here. From him, the writer of this paragraph learned much about the Catholic Laymen's League and its work in Georgia.

'Dean of Christianity'

The Most Rev. Francis M. Redwood, Archbishop of Wellington, New Zealand, and oldest member of the Catholic Hierarchy, attended the Eucharistic Congress at Dublin when he visited at Rome. Pope Pius XI refused to allow the aged prelate to kneel before him as he had done before four other Pontiffs. Instead His Holiness clasped him to his breast, exclaiming: "Tuus! The Only One." (Int. Souls blinded by the dust of the world cannot understand what an affliction it is not to find God.

It is a great imperfection to complain of little evils when so many of the poor in the world endure such great misery and have no one to whom they may even tell their necessities.

The ruins of the Cistercian Abbey at Boyle, County Roscommon, Ireland, were the scene recently of an historical event, when for the first time since the "Reformation" a religious ceremony took place there. St. Bernard at one time lived in the Abbey. In those days, now nearly 400 years ago, it was one of the finest of over 400 houses of the Cistercian Order in Ireland.

"When she (the saint herself) heard people saying that they wished they had lived with Christ, our only Good, dwell in the world, she used to smile to herself, thinking that while He so undoubtedly remains among us in the Blessed Sacrament, we have nothing left to desire."—St. Teresa of Avila in The Way of Perfection.
