Serving Italian Food That Pleases

Everyone enjoys good things to eat but not everyone knows how to prepare them nor just where to go to find them with the kind of service that leaves nothing to be desired. But take a tip, if you relish real Italian dishes, seek out the Holywood Spaghetti-House, 415 W. Main Street.

Famous spaghetti carefully prepared and served in a manner which pleases even the most particular, is on the daily menu at the Holywood Spaghetti House and priced at 25 cents. But they do more than provide Italian dishes, they also feature high class American food, certain to please those who visit this eating place.

Persons with a penchant for choice food, will find the Holywood Spaghetti House a delightful place to take their friends for dinner. You may be assured that the service and the food will be of the finest quality, and they will wish to return again from time to time to enjoy the exceptional service which is found there.

A chicken dinner is served on Sunday for 40 cents. Why not take the family there next Sunday for dinner?

Showing Latest In Summer Clothes, Hats

Beautiful clothes are always good clothes. And because they are good, they can be worn with pride for so much longer. Worn with confidence in their appearance, with delight in their luxury.

Pine clothes, especially now, are sound economy. They may be purchased at the "budget prices" of other years. There is no prudence in buying "cheap" when you step at the La Belle Apparel Shoppe, 1512 Lake Avenue.

A representative collection of the latest versions of the 1932 mode in coats, hats and dresses will be found among the large stock which Mrs. Adelman, proprietor, has in her shop.

Hats that will go to business; hats that will go to bridge teas and hats that will go to the best places. There's immense variety in the shapes of the new hats and this is especially noticeable at the La Belle Apparel Shoppe.

STRANGE BUT TRUE Catholic Facts But Little Known

"Mary" in the Modern Office

By Katherine Schuldes In "MARHANA"

Among Catholics the idea is prevalent "Be a Saint! Be a Saint! Why I'm only a stenographer! I have no chance to be a saint. Not me!"

Such an idea is false. To each and all of us who walk the humdrum way of the life of "the man in the street" Our Lord said: "Be ye perfect as your Heavenly Father is perfect"—and that means unqualifiedly perfect. It means the highest holiness, St. Paul, too, intended his letters for the ordinary everyday men of his time, not the rank and file of men who lived in pagan Thebes and corrupt Ephesus, and in Corinth and in Rome. To these he held out what? Sanctity, pure and simple, unalloyed, so far reaching and inclusive, that each and every one of these ordinary men and women was to become Christ's double.

We all know that a business life is colorless, but so was Mary's life at Nazareth. But we, like Mary, can become holy by doing the job-hand as God wanted her, and that is Sanctity, as our great speaker, Father Le Dupe, says: "To be a saint one needs no least out-of-the-way thing in one's life. To be a saint one needs only to do each and everything in life well, as Mary did the big things and the little things the things in public and those that only God sees: our work, pleasures, our very sleep. One can eat as ordinary men and women, one can work in the office or factory, one can work in the office or factory, one can go to the theater and be a saint."

I think there is many a Mary in a subway train. Isn't it a perfect picture of the world, that train rushing blindly underground? It is packed with all manner of men and women. How many of them are cynical, self-centered, black with sin? How many are seeking happiness where it cannot be found? How many despair of finding it?

"Daily Prayer" Of A Catholic Jurist

The following "daily prayer" recently published in the New York Law Journal and originally published in the United States Law Review, was found among the papers of the late Edward C. Ryan, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin from 1877 to 1880.

Catholic Literature

There are many, even among the educated, who seem to be strangely ignorant of the fact that there exists such a thing as Catholic literature of a very high quality. Literature that combines worth-wholeness, depth of thought and beauty with healthiness of tone. To mention a few authors: in fiction we have Sheehan, Sienkiewicz, Robert Hugh Benson, John Ayscough, Chesterton and others. Fine essays: Newman, Belloc, Chesterton, Agnes Repplier, Katherine Breyer, Father Ronald Knox, Maurice Francis Egan, etc. Good poetry: Pope, Crashaw, Francis Thompson, Lionel Johnson, Adelaide Procter, Louise Imogen Guiney, Joyce Kilmer, Alice Meynell, Alfred Noyes, Peeney, Katherine Tynan, Theodore Maryland, Dryden, etc. Drama: Paul Claudel, Martinez Sierra, Gogther, C. Young, etc. Biography: Belloc, Agnes Repplier, Papien, Henry Goudy, Wilfred Ward, Theodore Maynard, Thomas Walsh, William Thomas Walsh and Father Martindale.

AFGHANISTAN, MOHAMED'S LAST STRONGHOLD

By Rev. George J. Blatter (Editor's Note: This highly interesting report of Father Blatter's sojourn as first-residing priest in Afghanistan is being reprinted serially with permission from The Medical Missionary, publication of the Society of Catholic Medical Missionaries, Inc.)

(Continued from Last Week) Peshawar lies about 100 miles northwest of Rawalpindi. It counts some 150,000 inhabitants and has been an important city on that dreary rock-strewn plain at the foot of a barren Himalayan mountain spur and only nine miles from the ancient Khyber pass. It probably harbored the troops of Alexander the Great when he invaded India 320 years before Christ. A large cantonment of the British Army adjoins the native city on the north and is itself a beautiful city with wide avenues and parks, made possible by copious irrigation from the Kabul River.

The road now began to get rough and showed considerable progress. To the right opened up a wide plain and the waters of the Kabul River gleamed at the foot of the circling mountains in the distance. About four miles further lies an Afghan town of mud huts, where the custom officials again examined our passes. The manager invited me to his quarters on the hill to the left and showed great friendliness, offering cooling drinks. Of course we had to communicate more by signs than by words; but our way was now cleared to Kabul, as far as the Afghan Government was concerned.

Spiritual Thoughts

St. Bonaventure Says Here are real ladders of perfection, first, a well-intentioned unobtrusiveness in all one's words and actions; then, to be devout, to be prompt in obeying, to be instant in prayer, to confess one's faults frankly and often, to give ready service, and lastly, to shun unprofitable society.
