"Glacier Priest" Returns From Alaskan Trip

Father Hubbard, Jesuit Explorer and Scientist, Has Story of Scientific Achievements and Adventure

San Francisco. The Rev. Bernard R. Hubbard, S.J., famed "father of the glaciers," is back in the United States after another notable expedition into the Alaskan wastes among the volcanic mountains of that region.

With the completion of another series of scientific exploits that included the gathering of the highest volcanic temperatures known to man, Father Hubbard returned to the United States after a trip to Alaska.

Talks on Science Father Hubbard insisted on talking about science, rather than relating adventures. He said his recollections of the happiest ending of all the expeditions had the worst beginning.

Father Hubbard's listeners, however, were more interested in hearing how he landed by airplane three times on the floor of Aniakchak crater.

"We flew for 50 minutes inside the crater and landed on a precipitous ledge three fifths of a mile below the rim," he said. "Once we developed a gas shortage, and Pilot Frank Dorlandt rocketed the plane out of the crater by riding the hot outbursts of air from the volcano's vent holes."

Father Hubbard wore a moose-skin jacket encrusted with bead work, representing 600 hours of work by the native children at Holy Cross Mission on the Yukon, and presented in appreciation of Father Hubbard's work for the Jesuit mission.

Before scaling Mt. Shishaldon Alaska's Fujiyama, Father Hubbard said that he and his party waited 21 days at the foot while the volcano vented hot bolts of rock. The climb itself took 21 hours over a precarious footing of snow and hot ashes.

George Peterson, Alaskan guide, and Rodney and Kenneth Chisholm, members of the party, who preceded Father Hubbard here, also welcomed him, along with Margie and Katala, Alaskan malamute dogs.

Fire in College Does Great Damage

(Continued from Page One) "This misfortune is a veritable catastrophe," said Father Willmann. "The worst that has afflicted the mission interests of the American Jesuits since the Belize disaster in Central America. The work of three-quarters of a century has been wiped out in a matter of hours. Although, fortunately, there was no loss of life as in Belize, the financial loss is tremendous, perhaps irreparable. We shall strive to go on, however, with firm trust that the Lord of the Missions will provide whatever is necessary to further His cause."

On Way to the Philippines The Very Rev. Edward C. Phillips, S.J., Jesuit Superior with jurisdiction over the Philippines, was en route to Manila, Father Willmann said, and planned to sail from Seattle on Aug. 20. As soon as he reaches Manila he will consult with the Philippine Superior on the plan for rebuilding Ateneo College, with its libraries, laboratories and virtually priceless historical and scientific museum, representing the labor of seventy-five years of Jesuit endeavor in the Philippines. Founded in 1859, it was directed by Jesuit Fathers from Spain until 1921, when it was given into the charge of the American Jesuit Fathers.

The Rev. Francis X. Byrne, S.J., of Boston was the first president of the Ateneo. Under his leadership and with the encouragement of the late Governor General Leonard Wood, the school became a military institution popularly known in the Philippines as "the West Point of the Orient."

The Rev. Richard O'Brien, S.J., of Baltimore, is president now. Pilgrim Travels 7,000 Miles Montreal—Mrs. Adams Charles Baker of Hawaii recently completed a 7,000-mile pilgrimage from her home to the Shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre, here.

If you would comprehend the burning charity of Jesus Christ toward you, you would see that all His dealings with you proceed entirely from love.

Mass itself have been reproduced from the Eastman Kodak film "The Sacrifice of the Mass." There are also full page reproductions of several famous paintings.

Atmosphere as the first installments of "The Eternal Sacrifice" began to appear in the various newspapers served by the N. C. W. C. News Service, that organization received letters from various priests and nuns, asking where the book could be obtained.

St. Ignatius School in Portland, Oregon, intends using it as a text for the seventh grade pupils. One priest wishes to use it for sermons. Book stores in various states as well as in Canada have already asked for copies, and other schools in the United States have planned to use the book as a text book.

Unusual Coat

The Rev. Bernard R. Hubbard, S. J., of Santa Clara University, returns from his latest expedition to the Alaskan wilds wearing a remarkable coat. The coat, a gift of Indian mission children, is made of moosehide, on which has been embroidered a graphic history of Fr. Hubbard's scientific achievements.

Father Hilbert in Chinese Mission Has Experience in Preparedness

Shaohek, in the Maryknoll Kayang mission field of South China, is a strong Christian center, where there are some twelve hundred Catholics, families who have been members of the Church for several generations. The name Shaohek means "Home of a Peaceful Old Age," but in latter times the proximity of the town to the boundary of Fukien Province and its Reds has somewhat disrupted the peace of centuries.

Recently the Rev. Charles P. Hilbert, M.M., of Rochester, N. Y., Maryknoll pastor there, and the other American priests at the Catholic Mission were awakened by a volley of rifle shots a few minutes before midnight, and their first thought was of a bandit attack. All rushed to the windows to find from what quarter the bandits were approaching, and saw the light of a hundred torches concentrated around a school about a hundred yards from the Mission.

They crawled on their hands and knees through the flooded rice fields toward the school, and soon came back with the information that the attackers were not bandits, but soldiers searching for Reds.

The Maryknoll Fathers at once thought of imparting the good news to the Dominicans, but, before any of them could reach the door, one of the German Brothers entered. There he stood in the doorway at midnight, a tall bearded figure wearing a sun helmet and overcoat, a sun umbrella in one hand, and his traveling bag in the other. His manner was of one setting out on a journey which had been long and carefully planned. The Brother was greeted by a burst of laughter, but the Maryknollers had to pay tribute to the German missionary's practicality. He was no novice at such flights, having made several in the Fukien German Dominican Mission which is periodically accosted by Red armies.

M. business sessions will begin for both men's and women's organizations separately. They will convene together, however, for the important addresses on vital topics to be given by the Rev. John M. Duffy, diocesan director of Catholic Schools, and by the Rev. Joseph J. Baiert, S.T.D., of the faculty at St. Bernard's Seminary. Reports of separate committees and adoption of resolutions will conclude the convention program in the afternoon. Final plans were completed at a meeting of the local branch held Thursday evening, August 18th, at St. Joseph's Hall.
