curiously, he stopped as if in hesitation. "Go on," thundered the King, "why stop you now?"

"It is only," he said, "that McDuff saw her enter a cave a cloverly hidden that one passing along with in the forest can scarce perceive it."

Malcolm said not a word but a strange, terrible, groaning cry came from his throat as he went to a secret trying place? For what? Whom did she meet there?

For days he brooded, stealthily watching his lady. At last he could stand the strain no longer and biding his chance he followed her one day as she set out for her customary walk through the forest of Dunfermline.

"Dear God, keep my husband safe from all stain of sin, make him good, so that he will win his soul's salvation." Thus prayed Margaret, as she beheld her husband stumbling into the cave. Tears were streaming down his rough face as he threw himself at her feet.

"Margaret, Margaret, forgive me as I pray that God will." That was the only cloud that ever arose between these two, Malcolm and Margaret of Scotland.

Their happy reign continued for years and God blessed them with a large family, six sons and two daughters. Margaret always exercised her great influence in the cause of piety and religion. Through her efforts a synod was held which inaugurated special reforms for the benefit of the Church in Scotland.
